TRIAL IS HALTED
AS SCHWIMMER
BECOMES ILL IN FEDERAL COURTTax Case Defendant
Goes to Hospital—
Judge Cancels Session, Orders Jury to Return Tomorrow.

The trial of Matthew J. Connelly, T. Lamar Caudle and Harry I. Schwimmer, charged with conspiring to defraud the Government, was halted today when Schwimmer became ill in the courtroom and was taken to a hospital.

United States District Judge Ruben M. Hulen called off the afternoon session and instructed the jury to report tomorrow morning. He took under consideration a suggestion that the Government have a physician examine Schwimmer.

Judge Hulen was informed by a defense attorney that Schwimmer, who was taken to Lutheran Hospital in a taxicab shortly before noon, had suffered "an angina pectoris" and was emotionally upset. Angina pectoris is a form of heart disease marked by severe pains in the chest.

Wyllis Newcomb, chief Government counsel, told the court: "If this becomes an issue, we want the appointment of a doctor by the Government to conduct an examination of Schwimmer, and we want evidence of his physical condition and activities immediately before and up to the time of this trial."

Newcomb pointed out that Schwimmer claimed to be ill and was taken to Lutheran Hospital when he testified before a federal grand jury in St. Louis last November. Medical examinations at that time indicated Schwimmer "did not have a heart condition serious enough to warrant not going forward," the Government attorney said.

Schwimmer, a lawyer who formerly lived in Kansas City and now has a home in Puerto Rico, went on trial May 7 with Connelly, who was appointments secretary to President Truman, and Caudle, former head of the Justice Department's tax division.

The charge against the three defendants grew out of the handling of an income tax evasion case against Irving Sachs, St. Louis shoe broker, whom Schwimmer represented. Sachs paid a $40,000 fine on a plea of guilty but did not go to prison.

Harvey Cox, one of Schwimmer's attorneys, informed Judge Hulen the seriousness of the defendant's condition could not be determined without certain tests, including an electrocardiogram.

After an examination, Government and defense attorneys agreed that an examination of Schwimmer by a Government-named physician should be made this afternoon. Judge Hulen remarked, however, that a doctor could not be found "on a moment's notice" to do this.

Although Newcomb said the would insist on a physician look at Schwimmer, no decision was reached on when the examination would be made.

Judge Hulen then called in the jury and said the trial this afternoon because of Schwimmer's illness.

Schwimmer, who has had heart disease for several years, asked Judge Hulen's permission to leave the courtroom at 11:15 a. m., shortly after he testified on a defense motion. He wobbled as he neared the door and two men helped him into a corridor.

Ordered to Hospital.
After leaving the courtroom, Schwimmer was assisted to the office of United States Marshal Omar Schnatmeier, where a physician examined him and then ordered him taken to a hospital.

OLD VANDEVENTER STATION RAZED,
WORLD FAIR STOP

Vandeventer Station, which was a suburban stop on the Washburn Railroad about the time of the World's Fair in 1904, is a victim of progress. It is being torn down to make way for the extension of the Express Highway to Market street.

Railroad spokesmen said "it never was much of a station" but "it got its biggest play about the time of the World's Fair, although it wasn't particularly close to the fairgrounds."

Thirty years ago when the Washburn moved its operations from the riverfront to include Delmar Station in its route, Vandeventer Station at Vandeventer avenue and Market street was discontinued as a passenger station.

Since then it has been used as the Vandeventer yard office. In it the yardmaster has an office and there are facilities such as bunks, lockers and washrooms for switching crews.

A new yard office to replace Vandeventer is being constructed on Sarah street. The State Highway Department is paying the bulk of the cost of raising the old yard office and constructing the new one. The railroad is making some contribution to the cost.

KIN OF 88 KILLED
IN KOREA SUE U.S.
FOR $1,000,000 EACH

DENVER, May 23 (UPI)—Eighty-eight survivors of men lost in the Korean conflict sued the Federal Government for $1,000,000 each yesterday.

The main plaintiff was Eugene R. Guild of Glenwood Springs, Colo., whose son, Marine Lt. John Guild, was killed in action in Korea.

Guild and 87 other persons who lost sons or husbands in Korea charged in the suit, filed in United States District Court, that Presidents Truman and Eisenhower, acting for the Federal Government, "needlessly and in violation of the Constitution deprived the plaintiffs of their sons/husbands, who in consequence lost their lives or their liberty."

The suit alleges that both Truman and Mr. Eisenhower withheld "tactical and strategic support" from American soldiers in Korea.

"The Government, in fear of and to appease the Red army, rigging the rules to prevent victory, thereby depriving our sons/husbands of a better chance for their lives or liberty," the suit said.

FUNERAL SERMON ON TAPE

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 23 (AP)—Funeral services were held yesterday for the Rev. Harvey B. Musselman. The funeral sermon was a tape recording of the last public message the Rev. Mr. Musselman delivered.

The minister died Friday at the age of 88. His funeral sermon dealt with the Ninety-first Psalm.

Glendale Votes Tax to Keep Up Park, but No Bonds to Buy It

Glendale voters approved a new tax for park maintenance at a special election yesterday. At the same time they defeated a bond issue proposal to purchase the park the tax was intended to maintain.

The bonds were intended to raise $200,000 for purchase of a nine-acre tract and to build facilities in the 1000 block of Essex avenue. The vote was 1079 in favor, 897 against. A two-thirds majority was required, so the vote was 232 short.

The vote on the tax—a 10-cent rate—was 1097 in favor and 885 against. On that question a simple majority was enough.

City attorney William H. Dahman said the tax would not be levied because the bond issue failed.

CITY BUDGET SET

ALDERMEN GET
$1.82 TAX RATERise of One Cent Per $100 Valuation—P.S.
Co. Pays Gross Receipts Levy Under Protest.

A bill setting the 1956-57 St. Louis tax rate at $1.82 on the $100 assessed property valuation, a 1-cent increase over the old rate, was introduced today in the Board of Aldermen.

The aldermen heard a detailed explanation by Comptroller Milton Carpenter of the annual budget bill calling for expenditures of a record $53,751,921 for operation of city departments and agencies for the fiscal year which began last April 10.

Carpenter said the budget bill itself would not be ready in printed form for the aldermen until tomorrow or possibly Friday.

The budget and the proposed tax levy were approved last yesterday by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which had met daily during the last month to trim departmental requests from $55,000,000.

P. S. Co. Pays Tax.
Anticipated revenue for the new fiscal year is $53,751,921, or only $694 above the budget figure. This includes a payment—under protest—of $700,000 by Public Service Co. for the 5 per cent gross receipts tax for 1955.

The transit company, which has begun a court challenge of the tax, paid the $700,000 yesterday stating that the payment did not constitute an admission that the levy was valid.

Company officers said they did not pay the entire $731,433 tax in order to present a justiciable controversy before the court.

Carpenter told the aldermen that if the transit firm won the suit, it would be entitled to a refund not only of the $700,000 paid yesterday but also of the $750,000 paid under protest last year.

Attack On Fare Rise Dropped.
As a result of the company payment, the city council's office today asked the Missouri Public Service Commission to dismiss the city's earlier motion for cancellation of the $450,000 annual fare increase granted the company last Feb. 24.

In an accompanying letter, the city pointed out its dismissal request did not extend to another motion it had filed asking the commission to make a separate study of streetcar and bus operations.

The city has contended that "obsolescence" of the streetcar system is the basis for rate making purposes out of proportion to the amount of revenue it produces.

The proposed city budget exceeds by more than $2,000,000 the budget of $51,485,339 approved by the aldermen last year.

No Provision for Pay Rise.
Carpenter said the new budget proposal makes no provision for the requested 5 per cent pay increase for almost all city employees, now pending before the Civil Service Commission. The budget simply provides for normal pay increments, Carpenter said.

As far as the proposed 5 per cent increase is concerned, he said, "there just isn't the money."

Asked whether higher taxes would have to be levied in order to provide for such a pay rise, Carpenter said that if the rate is granted, "you will have to have another source of revenue, and raising taxes is one means of providing it."

Carpenter added that he felt the proposed budget was "adequate," although he pointed out it did not include all of the requests made by city departments.

The proposed municipal levy of $1.82 includes a 5-cent rise Continued on Page 8, Column 4.

BRITONS TYPE

KHRUSHCHEV AS
'A LITTLE HITLER'

The New York Herald Tribune Post Dispatch Special Dispatch
WASHINGTON, May 23—Nikita S. Khrushchev, one of Russia's top leaders, impressed those who came into contact with him on his recent British visit as being "a little Hitler," according to reports reaching here from London.

"Khrushchev was aggressive, offensive, a determined Communist, interested in our side of an argument, a typical Communist party boss," said one London report. "He spoke in terms and mannerisms reminiscent of Hitler—a little Hitler."

It was Khrushchev who, at a dinner given for him by British Labor party members, rejected a suggestion that Russia free Socialist held captive by Communist regimes behind the Iron Curtain in what those present described as a "most offensive" manner.

Former Premier Georgi M. Malenkov, also visiting England, impressed Britons as being "agreeable and intelligent—you had the feeling that you had a chance of getting somewhere with him," according to a London report.

Pleaders.

WASHINGTON, May 23—President Eisenhower, it was learned yesterday, has emphatically instructed the Joint Chiefs of Staff to act as a "corporate body" in their determination of high military policy and to elevate their joint solutions above the inter-service squabbling in lower echelons.

The President, it can be stated, has said the most important and continuing participation in coping with fundamental conflicts between the services which blossomed into headlines last week.

No aspect of government, in fact, has more absorbed Mr. Eisenhower in the last three months than the question of military security. And almost nothing, it can be said, so disturbs the President as the kind of manifestations of Pentagon warfare that have crystallized in the last five days.

Joined in Review.
The President, it is known, has extensively reviewed with the Joint Chiefs the complex questions posed by nuclear and missile warfare. This review has been a series of meetings running from early February to late April.

The President's purpose in the conferences he has held with the Joint Chiefs is as follows:

1. To implant the "corporate body" idea so firmly that, regardless of lower-rank conflict, the Joint Chiefs can view important defense problems outside the scope of special service interests.

2. To educate the Joint Chiefs to fit their military responsibilities into the broad framework of major national goals, specifically including American diplomatic, economic and cultural objectives.

3. To analyze and report to him the shifts and trends in military organization and in concepts of war growing out of the new weapons technology, principally nuclear and missile developments. In other words, the President's military experience has given him a clear view of the changing requirements for service missions and functions that new concepts of war require.

No Decisions at Puerto Rico.
The President's series of conferences with the Joint Chiefs, who are led by Joint Chief of Staff Arthur W. Radford, preceded and followed the chiefs' own talks at Puerto Rico during the week of March 5. At that conference, no new decisions were taken on the fundamental conflict over roles and missions.

The heart of that conflict is how the new and still-to-come missiles, both guided and ballistic, will be fitted into the three services, particularly into the Army and Air Force.

The roots of this conflict run far deeper than petty jealousies Continued on Page 4, Column 5.

SHORTAGE BEHIND
COFFEE PRICE RISE
CALLED ARTIFICIAL

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—An "artificial" scarcity of mild coffees is behind recent coffee price increases, the United States Department of Agriculture said yesterday.

The statement came in an article in the department's monthly publication, Foreign Agriculture, titled "no coffee shortage this year."

The article said world production of coffee for 1955-56 increased at least 18 per cent over the preceding year, and predicted a doubling of carryovers, despite a rise in world requirements.

The "apparent answer" to the "contradiction" caused by heavy supplies and rising prices, it said, "is related to the supply situation for mild coffees."

"Since December 1955," the article continued, "it is believed that United States roasters and importers have purchased coffee on the basis of pessimistic crop reports which indicated a scarcity of mild coffees this season. These purchases in excess of a previous level of requirements may have created a temporary scarcity of milds."

"This scarcity of mild coffees real or artificial?" the article then asked, and replied: "On the basis of foreign agricultural service estimates, it appears to be the latter."

TWO NIKES DISCHARGED BY ARMY

In Test Fail to Destroy Target
Officers Disappointed by Showing—Holes in Drone Reveal That Missile
Did Score Hit.The New York Times News Service
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WHITE SANDS, N.M., May 23—The Army yesterday gave its first public demonstration of Nike, the pride of its anti-aircraft weapons, in which the nation has invested about a billion dollars for defense of major cities.

Before more than 100 reporters two Nikes were fired at a 500-mile-an-hour drone plane, flying a straight course. Officers, obviously disappointed when the missiles failed to destroy the target, announced hours later that holes in the drone showed it actually had been hit by one Nike.

(News dispatches disagreed on what range the Nikes had been fired. The New York Herald Tribune said the drone was flying at 35,000 feet. The Associated Press said the drone was approximately 30,000 feet from the Nike battery. The United Press said the drone was flying at 15,000 feet.)

The Nike has been criticized by the Air Force as inadequate to do the job assigned to it. Among other things Air Force officers have said that, in actual attack, enemy bombers, flying at 50,000 feet and at 600 miles an hour would release guided bombs 50 miles from the target, well beyond Nike range.

The Nikes were fired yesterday at 11:40 a. m. At 5:20 p. m. the Army issued a statement saying:

"The Nike fired today scored a hit on the target seen by the press. Initially the recovery crew could find no evidence of a hit. But the crew was without the necessary equipment to raise and study the underside of the drone.

"When raised by a crane, holes were found in the fuselage and underlying section of the target. . . . The strike would have destroyed an aircraft had it been flying in place of the all-metal drone."

At first the test seemed disappointing for the Firebee drone, a craft 11 feet long with a wingspread of eight feet, was outwardly intact as seen through field glasses as it settled to earth by parachute after the firing.

PRESIDENT AGAINST TAX CUT DESPITE PREDICTION OF BUDGET SURPLUS

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—PRESIDENT EISENHOWER said today the Government should by no means think of cutting taxes at this time despite an expected $1,800,000,000 budget surplus.

He told a news conference tax-cutting should be deferred until a start has been made on reducing the nation's enormous national debt.

There is such a thing as fiscal integrity, he said.

The $1,800,000,000 surplus recently estimated by the Treasury was only an estimate and could be far off, depending on the rate of revenue collections, he commented, and would be a very poor excuse for cutting taxes at this time.

ANITA EKBERG
HELPS HUSBAND
PAY HOTEL BILL

FLORENCE, Italy, May 23 (UPI)—Anita Ekberg started on her honeymoon by helping her husband pay his way out of their wedding night hotel.

A bill of $1360 faced British actor Anthony Steel when he emerged from the bridal suite shortly before noon. It was the tab for four days of high life in Florence.

"It's colossal," Steel grumbled. Anita came to the rescue. She signed over a stack of travelers' checks, saying "I have dollars that go anywhere in the world." The hotel refused to say how much she paid.

Both the blond Swedish actress and her bridegroom came down from their suite wearing dark glasses. They had 40 minutes to get themselves and 40 pieces of luggage to the railroad station. They left for London on a honeymoon.

STOCKS SELL HIGHER MOST OF DAY, THEN CLOSE LOWER

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—The stock market closed lower today after pushing into higher ground through most of the session.

The decline, which hit the market in the final hours, was more moderate than yesterday's sharp sell-off.

A burst of vigor in today's second hour sent prices of pivot issues up from their suitably shaded, and many issues turned to the downside. Losses ranged from fractions to around $2.

The bill was agreed to yesterday morning by the Senate House conferees assigned to resolve differences.

Senator Aiken of Vermont, senior Republican on the Agriculture Committee, said: "Although I do not believe the bill will be nearly as effective as 1957."

HOUSE FOLLOWS

SENATE IN VOTING
NEW FARM BILLCompromise Measure
With Soil Bank OK'd
304 to 59—President
Likely to Sign It.

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Congressional action was completed today on a farm bill designed to overcome objections which drew a veto for a broader measure April 16.

The House quickly passed, by a vote of 304 to 59, the compromise measure which the Senate approved yesterday. It was written by a conference committee after the two branches had passed separate bills.

The new bill, expected to be approved by President Eisenhower, was described by Representative W. R. Poage (Dem., Texas), its floor manager, as "not the second best farm bill we have had before us this year."

But "probably the third or fourth best, but the only one which seems to have a chance to become law."

"Lack of Understanding."
Poage accused the Eisenhower Administration of a "lack of understanding" of the farm problem. He used most of the one hour allowed for discussion of the compromise measure.

The new bill junked almost all of the provisions to which the President objected in last month's measure and gave him the major item he requested—a $1,200,000,000 soil bank program to pay farmers for taking surplus land out of production.

Representative John W. Heselton (Rep., Massachusetts), opposed the compromise on the ground it neglected "the legitimate interests of important segments of agriculture, particularly in the northwest, and ignores almost completely the interests of consumers and general taxpayers."

Both the Senate and the House refused to give the President authority he asked for when he vetoed the previous bill to pay farmers this year up to $500,000,000 for promising to put land in the soil bank in 1957.

The bill was agreed to yesterday morning by the Senate House conferees assigned to resolve differences.

Senator Aiken of Vermont, senior Republican on the Agriculture Committee, said: "Although I do not believe the bill will be nearly as effective as 1957."

SOMEWHAT curiously, Mr. Eisenhower replied that if the senator carries out his duty, the President would carry out his.

The reporter quoted Senator Symington to the effect that Congress has the constitutional duty to raise money for the support of the military forces and the right to see how it is spent.

"The day that discipline disappears from our forces, we will have no forces, and we would be foolish to put a nickel into them," he said. "There comes a place in the military hierarchy where someone must make a decision, and that decision must stick."

He said, however, that he had no objection to a man giving his personal opinions if he was asked for it and was carrying out his duties.

The reporter quoted Senator Symington to the effect that Congress has the constitutional duty to raise money for the support of the military forces and the right to see how it is spent.

SOURCES of leaks hinted. Secretary Wilson seemed to be threatening punishment for officers who might publicly disagree with the official Pentagon decision when he said yesterday, "We'll see who sticks their head up next. I think it might be a little dangerous."

The papers which have been these documents to the press. In an extraordinary press conference called by Wilson Monday, these men were referred to as "colonels," indicating that they were of middle rank. At this press conference, the civilian secretaries and the chiefs of staff put up a united front in support of present official programs.

Because the circulators of the documents are not known, they cannot be called before the courts.

SWEDEN SHUTS DOWN ON CIGARETTE

Ads to Stop Children's Smoking

Copyright, 1956, The London Observer.
STOCKHOLM, May 23—Sweden's government has barred advertising of all Swedish brands of cigarettes and suggested that foreign cigarette companies cut down their advertising in Sweden in a campaign to stop children from smoking.

An investigation in Stockholm schools showed that one out of every 13 children was smoking at the age of 10. At 16 every other boy and every fourth girl smoked.

When schools, parents and doctors began to complain, the state-controlled tobacco monopoly was ready to do its share. "And," says Elam Tunhammar, managing director of the monopoly, "we could not very well support an anti-smoking campaign in the schools and at the same time boost our cigarette sales."

So he stopped all advertising of Swedish brands, informed foreign cigarette companies whose products the monopoly imports and sells, and suggested their support.

WANTS DISPUTE

BROUGHT TO THE SURFACE; CITES
DOCTRINE SHIFTSWould Be Frightened
if Each Service Didn't Uphold Its Views—

Truth.(Related Articles on Page 1C.)
By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23—President Eisenhower, speaking today as commander in chief, approved strong rivalry among the three armed services but disapproved the manner in which the current controversy has been conducted.

He told his press conference that he would be frightened indeed if, in these times of change and fluidity, there were not good strong arguments among the military forces with each service fighting for its own point of view.

In the military organization, he said, it was the duty of every man to fight for his point of view but finally, after a decision is reached, to loyally support it.

The first question at the conference was about the controversy that broke out over the weekend in news stories quoting Air Force and Army anonymous documents criticizing the Defense Department's missile program and the Navy's super aircraft carriers.

Wants Proper Perspective.
A reporter noted that Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, after a White House visit yesterday, had described the President as "a bit unhappy" about the differences among the armed services. He asked whether the President saw anything in the situation that required his direct intervention.

The President replied that he was commander in chief of the armed services and that there was no important military question that he could not handle. He added that he thought the controversy among the services should be seen in proper perspective.

In these days of new weapons, he continued, there is constant change and fluidity, and military doctrine that was sacrosanct in the past are being deserted.

All differences, he said, should be studied in a spirit of honest search for the truth and not with a purpose of just seeing whether an interservice fight can be promoted.

Asked About Inquiries.
The Post-Dispatch, noting that Democratic Senators Symington of Missouri and Dennis Chavez of New Mexico announced yesterday that their subcommittee would call on the military brass to testify about the present controversy, asked whether these officers would be permitted to tell about their differences with their superiors.

The President said he did not understand what was meant by superiors.

"The day that discipline disappears from our forces, we will have no forces, and we would be foolish to put a nickel into them," he said. "There comes a place in the military hierarchy where someone must make a decision, and that decision must stick."

PRESIDENT SAYS THERE IS EXCESS OF PESSIMISM ON WORLD AFFAIRS

Progress Is Being Made, Even Though Slowly, He Thinks — Disappointments Daily Possibility.

By GEORGE H. HALL, A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23—President Eisenhower said today there was too much pessimism about international relations. He told his news conference he did not mean that everything was perfect, but that progress was being made, even though slowly.

The President said that in view of the kind of problems facing the world there was the daily possibility of some disappointments. The United States, he said, was determined to be friendly to both sides in controversies but that in dealing with some 50 countries, each with its problems, there was bound to be dissatisfaction.

Mr. Eisenhower was commenting on a question by a reporter who said that every week or so some responsible person criticizes the "slippage" of western foreign policy vis-à-vis that of the Communist countries.

Advocates the Long View. Slippage could occur anywhere, the President said, but was more likely in a congeries of equals than under totalitarian governments. But he said criticisms should be viewed over a period of time, that to hear oneself criticized in a foreign parliament on a specific day was not enough.

Mr. Eisenhower pointed out that the present Russian policy of economic aggression was a new development and that until there was agreement in a free world as to just what it meant there would be criticisms and controversies.

He was asked whether, in view of this, he had considered reviving the idea of the "fire-side chat." President Roosevelt explained his policies in informal radio talks, particularly when he wanted to put pressure on Congress.

He had thought about it often but had not decided whether it would be a helpful move, the Chief Executive said. He pointed out that the questions of reporters at his weekly news conferences reflect the thinking of the American people. This was his eighty-eighth formal session with reporters.

Russian Manpower Cut. The President was asked why there was so much difference in the interpretations of the Soviet announcement of a 1,200,000 armed forces reduction by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Harold E. Stassen, the White House adviser on disarmament, and what the proper reaction should be.

Stassen said the announcement meant the Russians wanted to proceed with disarmament talks and that it was a step the United States wanted them to take. Dulles attributed the move to a Russian need for industrial and agricultural manpower, and said Russian military might would not be lessened and might be increased.

The President seemed generally to back up Dulles but he said he had talked to both Stassen and Dulles and had found their views logical. He said Russia's intention appeared to be to bring its armed forces further in line with modern conditions of warfare and to make better use of manpower.

Mr. Eisenhower said frankly, however, that he didn't know anything about the Soviet plan. If there is proof finally that the Russian move is a step in the reduction of armaments it would be real progress and would be warmly received, he said.

No Course but to Wait. The President observed, however, that the announced cut would leave the Russians with 115 divisions and thousands of planes. If the Soviets were to announce they were retiring several hundred modern submarines, that would be getting somewhere, the President said. He saw no other recourse than to watch hopefully and follow our own policies.

A reporter referring to disclosures that small amounts of arms have been going to Saudi Arabia, said government sources, when asked about specific shipments, replied that they were being made as part of an earlier commitment. The reporter wanted to know what the commitment was.

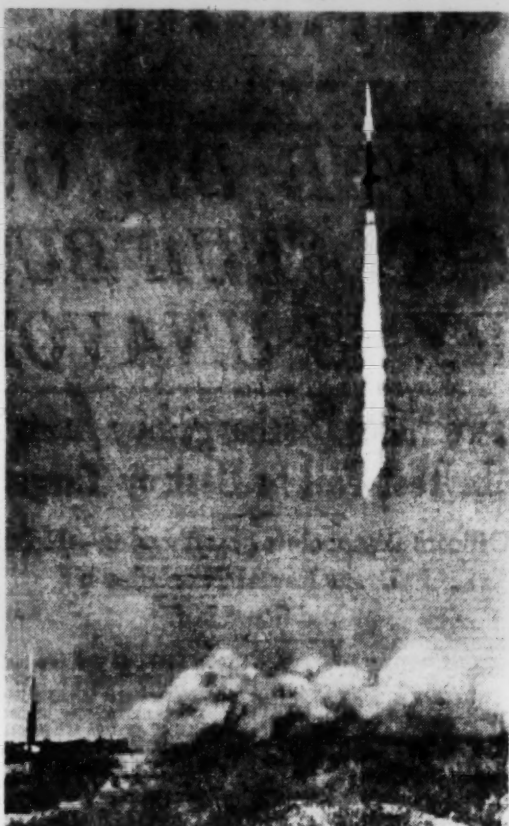

The President said he thought it dated from last August, that it dealt only with matters affecting the internal security of Saudi Arabia and that the amount involved was $16,000,000. He pointed out the United States was interested in co-operating with Saudi Arabia because we had a base there.

Asked to comment on Egypt's extension of diplomatic recognition to Communist China, the President said the United States thought Egypt made a mistake. He added that a single act such as this did not destroy a friendship.

Asked whether one nation could win a war in 24 hours with hydrogen bombs, Mr. Eisenhower wondered what the nation attacked would be doing while the aggressor was attacking. There would be a real shambles, he said.

Missile in Test Run

2 NIKES FIRED BY ARMY FAIL TO DESTROY TARGET

erred from among the wastes of sage cactus, grasswood and tumbledown around 2:30 p.m. A small army of technologists went to work to determine whether it had been hit.

The plain fact was, however, that the Firebee, though damaged, was not destroyed, and high Army officers, anxiously watching, were obviously crestfallen.

The Nike shoot was to have climaxed the day after the Army had staged spectacular and more effective shots with its gigantic bombardment missiles the Corporal and the Honest John.

The outcome was all the more disappointing because three batteries of Nikes, each employing a standard set of one acquisition and two tracking radars, had been allowed to compete and fix on the target. Two batteries fired one Nike each.

Suspense developed as the newspapermen from all over the United States gathered in a bleacher stand 800 yards south of the battery emplacements. The desert air was clear. The long slim missiles belied their tone of weight, they looked more like toothpicks in the distance.

Carried by Mother Plane. An Air Force plane flew across the desert sage with two of the Firebee drones nestled under its wings. Much higher than the mother plane streaked an Air Force jet fighter, its mission was to shoot down the Firebee in case it went out of control and headed in the direction of El Paso.

The plane was to launch one of the jet propelled Firebees at a distance of 70,000 yards north of and 16,000 feet above the observers stand. A smoke pot had been fitted to the Firebee so that the observers might be able to spot it in the distant blue.

The observers saw the smoking Firebee leave its mother plane. Suspense mounted. Swift scanning acquisition radars whirled rapidly to pick up the little target on its radar screens.

The briefing officer emphasized the smallness of the target by explaining that it made only one-tenth the electric "return" on the radar screens as a fighter plane.

Unexpectedly the briefing officer announced that an intercept ground optical recording camera, one of 70 instruments recording the test data, had lost the image of the Firebee against the dark brown mass of the Organ mountains.

The Firebee had to be re-routed because the Army refuses to stage one of these tests merely as a "show." They are too expensive and every test must pay its way in vital scientific data useful in further developments.

Soon the Firebee was "attacking" again, however. The acquisition radar picked up the target for three waiting Nike batteries. Then a tracking radar took over to follow every movement of the Firebee. Another tracking radar was waiting to track the Nike by bringing the target the Nike. By bringing the target two images, of target and Nike, together on the complex fire control instruments Nike is supposed to "lock on" and destroy the attacker.

Suddenly a Nike in the middle battery roared straight up with incredible speed. A few seconds later a Nike from the battery on the right streaked after it. They were soon lost to human sight but a few seconds later their vapor trails could be seen in the upper air. Then there were two tiny puffs as they burst. There followed a few minutes of silence and tense watching and then the round, silver parachute gracefully detached itself from a massive white cloud.

This was the great moment of anti-climax. If there had been a direct or even close hit there would be nothing to parachute down. The Firebee would have been shattered. However, the Nike explosion might have damaged the Firebee's delicate instruments sufficiently to trigger the parachute mechanism. But this mechanism could also be released electronically from the ground in cases of misses. This is a point still to be cleared up.

For many minutes the Firebee drifted down slowly. Through binoculars it could be seen rotating from the parachute shrouds and every time that it swung broadside it was plain that the configuration of the Firebee was still intact.

GORE, STRAUSS DISPUTE ATOMIC POWER POLICY

Senator Urges Early Construction of Six Nuclear Generating Plants by U.S.

By RICHARD DUDMAN, A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23—Senator Albert Gore (Dem., Tennessee), challenged the present atomic power policy today and called for early Government construction of six full-scale nuclear generating plants.

He declared the $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 "crash" program is necessary if the United States is to regain the lead and beat Russia and Great Britain in the race to harness the atom for peaceful purposes.

"I must conclude that we are losing the race for construction of industrial and civilian atomic power reactors," he said.

Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission picked up the challenge. He said the United States now holds "genuine leadership" in development of nuclear power and suggested Gore's proposal would be a backward step.

The two men clashed politely at a hearing by the Senate House Joint committee on atomic energy on Gore's bill for Government construction of the six huge nuclear power plants.

Open debate thus began on a fundamental question—whether the United States shall rely on private industry, with heavy government subsidy, to develop an atomic power industry, or whether the government itself should build full-scale plants at the start.

Gore emphasized that his proposal for government construction of six plants would replace the present program of government-subsidized private industry.

He and other members of the committee joined Strauss in strong endorsement of two pending bills to provide additional incentive to private industry. One would provide government liability insurance for excess damage resulting from a possible runaway atomic plant. The other would exempt atomic power companies from provisions of the Public Utility Holding Company act.

Gore argued that the United States had a "moral compulsion" to gain and retain world leadership in peaceful application of atomic energy.

"In the eyes of the world, we have placed major emphasis upon atomic destruction, as indeed we have," he said. "We are the first and only nation to unleash the atom for destruction. We have a clear moral responsibility to be the first to make this marvelous new source of energy available to improve the lot of mankind. Here is the opportunity for us to dispel the Soviet propaganda that we are a nation of warmongers."

Both Russia and Great Britain have announced plans for construction of more atomic power capacity by 1960 than contemplated in the most optimistic AEC plans, Gore noted.

"Even if Congress removes all the roadblocks to the complete satisfaction of private industry, and even if every plant under consideration is completed, we will still have lost the race," he said.

Gore said he was convinced the Russians had adopted a primary objective of surpassing the United States in the development of atomic power. He added, "We cannot afford to assume that they will not succeed."

Strauss, flanked by Commissioners Willard F. Libby and Harold S. Vance and members of the AEC staff, strongly opposed the Gore plan.

"We think we would be building obsolescent plants with scarce talent instead of moving forward into new areas," Strauss said.

He told the committee Libby and Vance shared his views and that they had been discussed in the presence of the fourth commissioner, Dr. John Von Neumann, absent because of illness.

The fifth commissioner, Thomas E. Murray, left Saturday for the nuclear weapons tests in the Pacific. Committee Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (Dem., New Mexico), said Murray would be permitted to submit his views later.

Last winter, Murray had urged a crash program of Government construction of atomic plants. He had challenged present AEC policy along the same lines as Gore.

Speaks of 'Kilowatt Race.' Strauss contended that the loss of "kilowatt race" was no cause for concern, arguing that "the mere number of kilowatts of capacity to be in existence by 1960 is not, in our view, very meaningful." The important thing, he said, is for the United States to maintain "genuine leadership based on sound scientific progress and technological development."

Both Russia and Great Britain have announced plans for construction of more atomic power capacity by 1960 than contemplated in the most optimistic AEC plans, Gore noted.

Upon leaving the Cabinet meeting, he said he had given the other ministers a frank explanation of his position and why he felt forced to leave.

He said the other ministers of his Radical Socialist party were remaining in the Cabinet.

MENDES-FRANCE RESIGNS FROM FRENCH CABINET

Former Premier Has Long Been at Odds With Mollet Over Algerian Policy.

PARIS, May 23 (AP)—Pierre Mendes-France, deputy premier and minister of state without portfolio, resigned tonight from the French cabinet.

A Radical Socialist former premier, Mendes-France has long been at odds with Premier Mollet, a Socialist, on the government's policy for coping with the rebellion in Algeria.

He told Mollet today he had decided to resign, then agreed to wait until a Cabinet meeting tonight before taking final action.

Upon leaving the Cabinet meeting, he said he had given the other ministers a frank explanation of his position and why he felt forced to leave.

House Group Gives Final OK To $1,109,000,000 Aid Bill Cut

Committee Members Vote 24 to 4 to Send Measure to Floor Where Action on It Is Set for June 6.

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The House Foreign Affairs Committee today gave its final approval, 24-to-4, to a foreign aid bill $1,109,000,000 below President Eisenhower's $4,900,000,000 request.

Chairman Richards (Dem., South Carolina), announced the formal committee action which sent the bill to the House. House leaders scheduled the measure for floor action June 6.

Richards did not identify the four "no" voters.

Administration leaders were reported planning a drive to restore the funds chopped off by the committee, but it was uncertain whether they would make a major move in the House.

There has been considerable sentiment in that chamber to cut the measure even further.

Another avenue for the Administration effort would be in the Senate where the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has yet to pass on the bill.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told his press conference yesterday that an effort will be made in the Senate committee to get the funds restored.

Representative Vorys (Rep., Ohio) said ahead of today's meeting that the Joint Chiefs of Staff feel that the one billion dollar cut the House committee voted in arms aid would force a revamping of the program.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, went before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday and appealed for restoration of the full amount asked by President Eisenhower. The Senate as well as the House still must act on the aid bill.

Termed Essential. As Wilson left the closed session, he told reporters: "I don't think the people realize military assistance is an essential part of our defense."

Senator Sparkman (Dem., Alabama), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he felt the House committee cut "entirely too much" from the aid bill. He said he would join in an attempt to restore much of the reduction.

Counting actions last week on the economic aid sections of the bill, the House committee had reduced the requested total by $1,109,000,000.

Richards disputed Defense Department objections that the funds slash would seriously hamper plans to continue bolstering free world countries against Communism.

"They're nuts," Richards said in a separate interview. "I never saw yet that they didn't come up before the bill was over and tell us we have ruined it."

Now $3,800,000,000. When the committee finished work yesterday, it had sliced the authorization measure for the bookkeeping year starting next July 1 to about $3,800,000,000.

Most of the reduction came on an 18-to-11 vote to cut a billion dollars off the three billion Mr. Eisenhower sought for military assistance. The move was made by Representative Fulton (Rep., Pennsylvania), and supported by Richards.

A Vorys proposal to trim only a half billion dollars was turned down.

Vorys said the Chiefs of Staff of the Army, Navy and Air Force were asked last November whether they could support a two billion dollar military aid request in view of the fact that Congress voted only one billion dollars for this purpose last year.

The Joint Chiefs turned this down after thorough study, Vorys said, and told the White House that even more was needed than the three billions Mr. Eisenhower later agreed to request of Congress.

Vorys said he understands the Joint Chiefs still are of the same opinion.

Advanced Weapons. The Ohio Republican said preliminary figures he has received from the Defense Department show the billion dollar cut would reduce from $530,000,000 to $250,000,000 the amount earmarked for advanced weapons to be sent abroad—a major new feature of the Administration program.

"It will mean substantial reductions in arms aid to Korea, Formosa, Viet Nam, Pakistan and Turkey, for instance," Vorys continued. "Some countries needed additional help in order to maintain what defense they already have."

Senator Sparkman told an interviewer: "While I get a chuckle out of the fact that the Administration brought this on themselves by allowing the pipeline to run dry last year in order to make a good budget showing, they ought to be allowed to refill it. I hope so, anyway. We'll try to restore as much as we can. I doubt if even the Republicans want to cut it that deep."

Senator H. Alexander Smith (Rep., New Jersey), another member of the Foreign Relations Committee, called the House committee action "terrible and against all testimony." Smith said he and a "good many others" will fight to restore the cut.

RUMOR OF GREEK CYPRIOT PLOT TO KILL EDINBURGH

Bodyguard of Queen's Husband Is Reported Increased — Other Precautions.

LONDON, May 23 (AP)—Security officials were reported today to have increased the Duke of Edinburgh's bodyguard after widespread rumors that Cypriot terrorists had slipped into Britain to try to kill the Greek-born husband of Queen Elizabeth.

The Home Office and Scotland Yard declined to discuss the reports of increased security precautions for Britain's royal family and for members of Prime Minister Eden's government, but an informed source said:

"The Duke's guard is three times as large today as it was before and other precautions have been taken concerning the safety of other persons in the United Kingdom."

The terrorists were rumored to be plotting to assassinate the Duke in revenge for the hanging by the British of two Greek Cypriots last week.

Greek-speaking Cypriots, who want their Mediterranean island united with Greece, are urging a campaign of violence against the British who govern the island.

The rebels have stepped up their assaults since the execution of the two Cypriots. Concentrated outbursts with bombs and small arms yesterday at Nicosia, Limassol and Famagusta took the lives of two persons and left six others wounded. Five of the wounded were British soldiers.

The Duke of Edinburgh was Prince Philip of Greece before his marriage. Some Cypriot extremists now consider him a traitor to Greece.

Scotland Yard has set up check points at British ports, but the movements of Cypriots are not easy to follow. As citizens of the British Commonwealth, they move about as freely as do British residents.

"Taking no chances, Scotland Yard has issued automatic pistols to the men guarding the royal family, Eden and members of his Cabinet. Bodyguards and police usually are unarmed."

HOUSE APPROVES $551,000 TO SET UP CITY FLOOD CONTROL PLAN

Omnibus Measure Sent to Senate—Karsten to Seek Speed-Up in Drafting Protective System.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23—A $551,000 appropriation for initial planning of a $130,987,000 flood protection system for St. Louis was passed by the House yesterday.

The funds, included in a $790,748,000 public works bill, would be made available in the fiscal year beginning July 1. The omnibus appropriation measure now goes to the Senate.

Passage of the bill came after sharp debate on funds for the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1957 fiscal year. There was no opposition to the St. Louis request.

Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem., St. Louis), told the House he would seek to speed up work on the flood control project by cutting down the time required for planning from two years to one.

Under a schedule outlined by the Army Corps of Engineers, planning would take two years, at an estimated cost of $1,200,000, with $551,000 representing the first year's installment.

Seeks Supplemental Bill.
Karsten wrote letters to Budget Director Percival F. Brundage and the Corps of Engineers to ask that the balance of the planning funds be requested in a supplemental appropriation bill during the present session of Congress.

He recalled that Congress last year authorized the project "without a dissenting vote" and that the planning had been started and said this "almost-unprecedented move" was "in the nature of a mandate to expedite the work."

Urging approval of the $551,000 item, Karsten told the House the city of St. Louis is the only metropolitan area on the Mississippi river that lacks flood protection. Four times in the last decade, he added, the city has been hit by floods.

In response to a question from Karsten, Representative Clarence Cannon (Dem., Missouri), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, indicated the committee would consider a supplemental request for the rest of the planning funds.

$101,000 Requested.
The Eisenhower Administration originally requested $101,000 for the planning and advance engineering work but this was increased at the urging of Missouri's Democratic Senators Thomas C. Hennings Jr. and Stuart Symington and the three Representatives from the St. Louis area.

The Corps of Engineers had informed Karsten that up to $800,000 could profitably be used for planning in the first year. After that phase is completed, it will take at least six years to build the flood protection system, the engineers have said.

The project, a series of earthen levees, concrete floodwalls and pumping stations, would protect against a flood stage of up to 52 feet on the west bank of the Mississippi at St. Louis. As authorized by Congress, the federal share would be $123,020,000. The city would contribute $7,547,000 from a $110,639,000 municipal bond issue approved by voters last year.

Other Projects.
The omnibus public works bill, containing funds for the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation and TVA, includes the following appropriations for other projects in the St. Louis area:

East St. Louis, $2,000,000 to continue construction of flood protection works.
Wood River Drainage and Levee District, $1,300,000 for construction.
Alton, $60,000 for planning.

Witnesses Who Were Silent

JOSEPH COSTELLO helping his wife dodge photographers today at the Federal Building.

COSTELLO, WIFE AND DOLAN BALK AT JURY INQUIRY

Relationship with Costello, ex-convict head of the Ace Cab Co. She had refused to answer 13 specific questions, among them being: "Did you ever see any of the Greenlee money?"

Asked About Visitors.
Mrs. Costello also refused to answer questions relating to "a green metal suitcase" and "a black metal suitcase" and about visitors to the Costello home, 2626 Guernsey court, on Oct. 6, 1953, the day Hall was arrested. Hall carried the ransom in two metal suitcases.

In remarks to counsel at the hearing, Judge Moore indicated it was conceivable Mrs. Costello could possess knowledge, through her husband, that might incriminate her.

Mrs. Costello gave the grand jury a partial answer to a question concerning how she had occupied her time on Oct. 6, 1953. She replied, "I'm a housewife."

Following the court session and a luncheon recess, the jury resumed the investigation, with three witnesses available. Among them was John F. Kinney, a Costello associate.

Other Prospective Witnesses.
Other prospective grand jury witnesses are John O. Hager, former taxicab driver, who drove Hall to a St. Louis county tourist court, and Mrs. Louis Shoulders, it was learned. Hager, Dolan and Mrs. Shoulders have appeared before the grand jury previously.

United States Attorney Harry Richards said the chief purpose in recalling the witnesses was to check some differences in their stories. He declined to elaborate on the discrepancies in their testimony.

Hager, who now lives in Los Angeles, was subpoenaed when he came here last month to attend the funeral of his mother. He also was questioned by police about a revolver found in Costello's automobile. The weapon is reported to have been transported from Illinois to St. Louis.

Convicted of Perjury.
Dolan and Shoulders were convicted of perjury after they appeared before a federal grand jury at Kansas City in the ransom investigation. Both were sentenced to prison.

Dolan has completed his sentence and now is working here. Shoulders recently suffered a heart attack at the United States Medical Center at Springfield, Mo., where he is confined.

Richards has contended that persistent investigation and questioning occasionally results in a "break" for the authorities. He has cited the solving of the million-dollar Brink's holdup as an example of such a "break." Assistant United States Attorney Forrest Boecker is presenting the ransom evidence to the grand jury.

MODEL BUILDING CODE BILL OFFERED IN EAST ST. LOUIS

A model building code recommended by the National Board of Fire Underwriters was introduced today in the East St. Louis City Council by Building Commissioner Robert J. Keeley. It will be up for passage at next week's meeting.

When a new zoning ordinance, now in course of preparation, is introduced, the basic requirements of a "workable plan" of urban renewal will have been met, Keeley said. Such a plan is required before federal funds are available for an urban renewal project sponsored by the city.

New plumbing, electrical and warm air heating codes have been adopted by the City Council. The present building code dates back to 1937.

SCHOOL ROBBED OF MOVIE PROJECTOR, TYPEWRITER

A $343 motion picture projector, a $121 typewriter and $49 in cash were taken last night by one or more burglars who broke into the Franz Sigel School, 2050 Allen avenue. The burglary occurred after 4:30 p.m. yesterday and was discovered at 7:30 this morning. Entrance was gained by breaking a window. The articles were taken from the principal's office, where another window was broken.

150,000 DEATH TOLL HERE IS ESTIMATED IF H-BOMB FELL

If a hydrogen bomb of the type exploded over the Pacific ocean last Monday were dropped on St. Louis, approximately 150,000 persons in the city and in St. Louis county would be killed, Brig. Gen. F. P. Hardaway (Ret.), Civil Defense Director, estimated yesterday.

If wind conditions made the fallout relatively worse, the number of deaths might be about 250,000, it was estimated by Harold L. Aitken of Washington, D. C., Assistant Federal Civil Defense Administrator, who is here making a study of survival plans.

The figures do not include the East Side. Gen. Hardaway made these further estimates: Within 3.5 miles of the point of burst, 75 per cent loss of life; 3.5 to 7 miles, 30 per cent; 7 to 10.5 miles, 5 per cent; 10.5 to 14 miles, 1 per cent. The figures were based on an assumed warning time of 3.5 hours, and consequent evacuation.

YOUTH CHARGED WITH TAKING PART IN HOLDUP ACQUIRED

Richard R. Martinez, 2700 block of South Jefferson avenue, was acquitted of a first-degree robbery charge last night by a jury in the court of Circuit Judge Michael J. Carroll at Clayton, after five hours of deliberation. Martinez is 18 years old.

He was charged with taking part in a $40 holdup of a filling station at Gravois and Sappington Barracks roads in St. Louis county last Feb. 24, in which the attendant, Robert Nelson, was slugged.

Martinez testified that when he and three companions stopped for gasoline he had no idea that a holdup was planned, and that he was looking at a map when he saw one of the others strike Nelson. He became frightened and ran out, he said. The other two have been charged. The third is a juvenile.

HUSMANN CO. STRIKE, FIRST IN ITS 26 YEARS, SETTLED

Settlement of a three-week strike by about 1250 employees of the Hussmann Refrigerator Co., 2401 North Leffingwell avenue, was announced yesterday by W. B. McMillan, company president.

When a contract expired April 30, the company offered a wage increase of 11 cents an hour. The employees demanded 15, but finally accepted 12, without additional fringe benefits.

It was the first strike since the company was organized 26 years ago. Hussmann manufactures food store refrigeration equipment. In addition to general offices and a plant on Leffingwell, it has a plant at 819 East Taylor avenue, and a sales division and service department at 6301 North Broadway.

MAGAZINE FIRM SHOTGUN HOLE RAIDERS HEARD IN BRINK'S TRUCK BY GRAND JURY JOLTS INSURERS

Police Tell of Seizing Material as Obscene —Action Likely Next Week.

Policemen who raided the Pierce Building News Co. May 14, seizing a large amount of printed matter on grounds of obscenity, have appeared as witnesses before the circuit court grand jury, which probably will take some action in the case next week, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

Morris Hoffman, the manager, was arrested as police searched the premises of the magazine agency at 2206 Locust street. None of the owners, members of the family of William Molasky, was present at the time.

The raid was made by officers of the juvenile and morality divisions of the police department and a representative of the circuit attorney's office. They had obtained a search warrant.

The search and arrest were based on the city's so-called "comic book" ordinance, which was passed in April 1955. It was the first raid on a distributing agency under the ordinance.

The publications seized, more than 40 of them, included some containing pictures of near-nudes and articles dealing with scandals and immoral conduct. Among them were copies of Confidential, Uncensored, Whisper, Breezy and Behind the Scene magazines, and books titled "Zowie," "Showgirl Cartoons and Photographs," and "But That's Unprintable."

Also seized was a bundle of magazines fastened with wire and prepared for delivery, and this included some highly regarded and popular publications, such as the Saturday Evening Post, Look and TV Guide. Also in the bundle were People Today, Home Improvement, Car Owner's Handbook, and The American Mercury.

Destruction of 20 books in Spanish, on grounds that they are obscene, was sought today in a petition filed in United States District Court by Assistant United States Attorney Robert C. Tucker.

The books, consisting of two 10-volume sets, were being mailed from Mexico to Peoria Heights, Ill., when they were seized here by the Collector of Customs. Tucker asked for a court order to have the United States Marshal destroy them.

Uneasy at Accidental Blast Damaging Armored Money Vehicle in New Jersey.

Insurance men who write policies on money carried in Brink's, Inc., trucks and on the lives of guards who ride in them expressed concern today over the piercing of the "armor plate" of a Brink's truck at White Plains, N.Y.

They were watching with great interest an investigation of the incident being conducted by top officials of the money transportation firm.

The incident occurred when a shotgun, accidentally discharged inside a Brink's truck, blew a hole in the rear of the truck and sprayed passersby with lead pellets.

Several Big Losses Paid.
"What was reported in the newspapers doesn't sound good," a New York spokesman for the Commercial Union Assurance Co., of London, told the Post-Dispatch. "But perhaps the full story has not been obtained. We will wait and see."

The Commercial Union Co. has paid off several big losses in recent years, including a record $1,210,000 taken by a gang of Halloween-masked robbers from the firm's armored car stronghold in Boston Jan. 17, 1950. The firm insures each truck up to $10,000,000.

"Those were serious losses," the spokesman said, "but they involved only the human element of protection. If what was reported is true, then the Plains Monday is true, then the protection offered by construction of the trucks is questionable."

Similar concern was expressed by Otto Planck of Chicago, a vice president of Brink's, Inc., who said, however, he would pass no judgment until he obtained all details of the incident.

"We didn't think it could happen and it may not have happened as first reported," he said. "We have ordered sectional photographs made of the armor plate allegedly penetrated by the blast and will study them closely before making any decisions. We are vitally interested."

Planck refused to reveal how thick the armor plate is. He said it was manufactured with a "special process."

A spokesman for the John Hancock Life Insurance Co., which insures the guards, said the firm was watching the investigation of the incident with interest. He said he did not think it would affect insurance rates because the Brink's group insurance policy was well established.

Arms Makers Surprised.
Representatives of arms manufacturers here said they thought it was impossible for a shotgun blast to penetrate armor plate. Armor plate is constructed to repel all but the most powerful shells, they said. The hole in the armor plate at White Plains was reported to have been made when a shotgun discharged as a guard reached for it to keep it from falling inside the truck. Five persons walking on the nearby sidewalk were slightly injured by flying lead.

$150,000 FESTUS BANK SUIT FILED OVER FIRE DAMAGES

A suit for $150,000 damages against the Missouri Natural Gas Co. has been filed by the Citizens Bank of Festus as a result of a fire last Jan. 22 which caused damage estimated at $100,000 to the bank building.

In its petition, filed in circuit court at Hillsboro, the bank contended that a fire control apparatus installed by the gas company for the building furnace was not operating properly at the time the fire broke out. The bank had notified the gas company to repair the control device the petition stated. The bank also contended the origin of the fire was at the location of the furnace.

FEMINE SALES FORCE IN STORE WEARING SHORTS

If shoppers wear shorts, why can't store employees? With this philosophy of equal rights for all women, the Clark Peeper Co., 33 North Meramec avenue, Clayton, has struck a blow for feminine freedom.

Its four women workers have been the envy of young women employed at nearby stores ever since the onset of warm weather. But the manager of the store and a clerk, with typical masculine conservatism, stick to long trousers.

Mrs. Harry Pfiffner, one of the four Bermuda shorts wearers, explained the origin of the practice. "We wore shorts and socks when we were helping to get the store ready for its opening last fall," she said. "Charles Peeper, our president, suggested we wear them this summer if we cared to, so we did."

Peeper confirmed her account in general, though he couldn't recall just who made the suggestion. "There was a lot of kidding about it," he said. "I know that I noticed how attractive the shorts were on those four girls. I still notice!"

DUNCAN I. MEIER DIES WHILE HAVING LUNCH

Chairman of Ludlow-Saylor Co. Collapses at Table at Noonday Club.

Duncan I. Meier, board chairman of Ludlow-Saylor Wire Cloth Co., died today at the Noonday Club, 319 North Fourth street, where he was having lunch.

Mr. Meier was sitting at a table with Dr. Cleveland H. Shutt, 26 Lake Forest, when he collapsed. Dr. Shutt pronounced him dead.

Relatives said Mr. Meier, 74 years old, had suffered from a heart ailment for several years. He lived with his wife, Mrs. Julia L. Meier, on Craig Road, Olivette.

Mr. Meier had been with the Ludlow-Saylor firm, 634 South Vandeventer avenue, for about 51 years and board chairman the last 15 years. He was a former board member of Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and later of Mercantile Trust Co.

A native St. Louisian, Mr. Meier was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Meier. He was graduated from Yale University in 1905. An active member of St. Michael & St. George's Episcopal Church, he also was a member of St. Louis Country Club.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Meier is survived by three sons, Duncan I. Meier Jr., district sales representative for Stecher - Traugott Lithograph Corp.; Henry L. Meier, plant superintendent of the Ludlow-Saylor firm, and Frederick C. Meier, an accountant for American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. and eight grandchildren.

MAN WHO KILLED MOTHER SENTENCED TO 10 YEARS

Roy P. Archer, 33-year-old maintenance man, was sentenced today at Clayton to 10 years in the penitentiary after pleading guilty of second-degree murder in the shooting of his mother, Mrs. Allena Mae Loomis, last Feb. 12.

Archer wept as sentenced was imposed by Circuit Judge Michael J. Carroll, but declined to make a statement when asked if he had anything to say. He was scheduled to go on trial today on a first-degree murder charge, but the charge was reduced when he agreed to plead guilty.

The defendant, the father of three children, shot his mother during a quarrel with her and his stepfather, William E. Loomis, at a tourist court at Times Beach, where the Loomises lived.

TRIAL IS HALTED
AS SCHWIMMER

hospital. The physician is an associate of a St. Louis doctor who has been treating Schwimmer.

While Schwimmer was in the marshal's office, resting on a couch, his wife came out and announced he had refused to go to a hospital, saying he was "going back into the courtroom if it killed him."

Schwimmer's attorney, Morris A. Shenker, then went in and talked to him for about 20 minutes. Schwimmer emerged, assisted by his wife and a man acquaintance. He walked very slowly, taking short steps, and appeared weak.

"We felt as long as the doctor ordered him to go to the hospital, it was best for him to do so, which he did under protest," Shenker told reporters. "We did not ask the court to adjourn or have the trial continued."

Shenker said Schwimmer became faint in the court and was excused by the judge. He felt worse in the marshal's office but then began feeling better after the physician gave him an injection of medicine, Shenker stated.

It was planned at first to take Schwimmer to the hospital in an ambulance, but he left in a taxicab, accompanied by his wife.

Checks Mailed to Home. Oil royalty checks sent to Connelly when he was Truman's secretary were mailed to his home in Washington instead of his office in the White House at Schwimmer's suggestion, testimony disclosed yesterday in Judge Hulen's court.

Prosecution testimony also showed the checks were removed from the firm's "window envelope" in Schwimmer's Kansas City office and then forwarded to Connelly's home with a covering letter.

Mrs. Gabriela Robb, former secretary to Schwimmer, testified yesterday she recalled royalty checks which were received at the attorney's office in the Dierkes building in Kansas City and were "mailed on" to Connelly.

Newcomb asked Mrs. Robb if she had spoken to Schwimmer about these checks.

"Yes, once," she replied. "He suggested it might be better to mail them to Connelly's home."

Newcomb then inquired if the witness recalled anything about "window" envelopes.

Mrs. Robb said she removed the royalty checks from envelopes of this type used by the oil firm which sent the royalty checks. The checks were then placed in another envelope with a covering letter from Schwimmer and forwarded to Truman's appointments secretary, she related.

Previously the Government had placed in evidence 25 oil royalty checks, made payable to Connelly and indorsed by him, for a total of $1418.

Gift of Schwimmer. The checks, covering a period from Feb. 15, 1950, to Feb. 15, 1952, were payments on $3600 oil royalty which the Government contends was given by Schwimmer to Connelly as part of a scheme to enable Sachs to avoid prosecution.

Mrs. Robb, now living at 9192 Wrenwood lane, Brentwood, told the jury she had placed long-distance calls for Schwimmer to both Connelly and Caudle in Washington.

Evidence of a telephone call made Jan. 16, 1951, to Connelly by Charles Oliphant, then chief counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau, was introduced.

The call referred to the Sachs case.

Oliphant said: "You know Schwimmer on Sachs. Does he just want to look good?"

Connelly was quoted as replying: "Wants to make sure not going to reverse Justice again."

The conversation occurred after Caudle, as head of the Justice Department's tax division, declined to prosecute Sachs and sent the case back to the Internal Revenue Bureau to see if it could be disposed of as a civil matter.

A transcription of the telephone call from Oliphant to Connelly was made by Mrs. Charlotte P. Dashner, now of Pontiac, Mich., who was a secretary in Oliphant's office. She took the stand to identify her record.

Earlier in the trial the Government produced evidence of a telephone call in which Connelly, calling from the White House, spoke to Oliphant in behalf of Schwimmer, saying: "He asked me to call you and let you know we know him."

The prosecution put into the record a letter dated Aug. 4, 1950, from Schwimmer to Caudle, in which the attorney stated: "Dear Lamar, Inclosed please find transfer order for your share of oil royalty we have purchased."

Schwimmer informed Caudle that "this royalty should pay close to $50 a month for a number of years and is an excellent investment." He advised the Justice Department official to sign and return a document showing Caudle as the owner of the royalty.

Argument Over Records. Arguments were heard today on a defense motion to exclude Government evidence obtained from Schwimmer's records in the Sachs case. The Government obtained these records by subpoena from Dean Rubber Manufacturing Co., Kansas City, where they had been stored. Shenker argued that the use of these records by the prosecution violated his client's constitutional rights by forcing him to give evidence against himself.

Schwimmer, before becoming ill, testified he had the records stored with the Dean Rubber Co. when he moved to Puerto Rico in 1953. He said, however, that he always "had in mind the possibility of returning to Kansas City and practicing law."

"I did not intend to abandon the records I stored with the Dean Rubber Co.," he said. "I considered the records mine and, when they were subpoenaed, I employed counsel to have them returned to me."

Newcomb argued that Schwimmer was too late with his complaint against self-incrimination, saying he should have raised this question earlier. Judge Hulen took the motion under advisement, stating: "I won't rule on the matter at this time. It is a serious question."

EISENHOWER HITS AT BICKERING IN

Symington armed services subcommittee which is investigating air power and the missiles program or the Chavez appropriations subcommittee for the armed services.

The differences about weapons programs and the assignment of roles and missions among the three services go higher than colonels and these differences may come out publicly in the subcommittee's hearings if the officers are permitted to testify about their criticism of rival services.

When a reporter asked whether the present controversy did not indicate a "new look" at the entire military establishment was required with the goal of a "more unified organization," the President replied he had studied the question for 15 years and that with changes of weapons almost every day new problems were always arising.

He said he did not think there were enough armaments in the world to make the United States safe, that the strength of America was to be found not alone in planes, ships and guided missiles, but in a number of things, such as school and farm programs and a balanced budget.

Going on Since 1911. The President appeared irritated when a reporter asked whether the civilian secretaries had conferred with him individually to present views on the latest controversy.

What controversy? he asked. Told that it was the issue that broke out a few days ago, he replied impatiently that controversy had been going on between the services ever since he joined the Army in 1911.

He said the military was having a new look at the situation every day, that he had given instructions that the civilian and military representatives could see him at any time and that if they had not come to him that was their responsibility.

At another point he said that if the requests for military funds from each of the services were added up they would reach as high as the Washington Monument.

During the questioning, the President said several times that while he favored arguments among the services it should be done so as not to alarm anyone. Until a final decision is made by the proper officials, he said he wanted exhaustion of every atom of logic in discussions.

Asked About Policy. A reporter asked whether a lack of change in political position was responsible for retaining the roles and missions that had been assigned to the armed services. He asked whether the American policy, as given by State Secretary John Foster Dulles in 1953-54, had been changed from "massive retaliation" to "selective retaliation."

Again somewhat irritated, Mr. Eisenhower said he was not going back to the Dulles statements without having the text before him. He said the sole use of the armed forces and that of H-bombs was their deterrent value.

By miscalculation, he continued, war could start in other spots. If there was war to the end between the two great powers, we would not be sitting around in a press conference today.

The President got steamed up when asked whether it was possible for any nation to win an H-bomb war in 24 hours. Say you win such a war, the President would then ask the other fellow he doing while you were destroying his productive capacity?

Integrated Problem? He said he would repeat again, again and again that the strength of America is not to be found just in a guided missile or a bomb, or in airplanes—it is everything, an internal as well as an external program. It must be solved, he said, not just by little bits of pieces all over the world but as an integrated problem.

Mr. Eisenhower was wearing a light gray suit with a pale blue shirt and a dark blue tie. In physical appearance he showed no change from recent weeks.

Asked whether he thought he had the capacity after his heart attack to withstand the physical and mental fatigue of a severe government crisis, such as occurred at the time of the Korean war, the President said he had lectured his doctors on the duties of the presidency but had not succeeded in changing the mind of anybody.

By the Associated Press. The press conference dealt also with these subjects:

Interior Department—Asked when he plans to name a successor to Douglas McKay as secretary, Mr. Eisenhower replied he knows of nothing he has given more thought and study to. But he gave no hint when a successor will be nominated. McKay resigned from the Cabinet April 13 to run for the United States Senate from Oregon.

Segregation—The President was told that three labor union conventions have urged him to call a conference to ease racial tensions which have developed since the Supreme Court anti-segregation school ruling. He replied he is not certain a conference would be the best way to go about it, although he said he is not against conferring with individuals regarding that matter. He added that he does not want a conference that possibly would worsen the situation.

The President said Attorney General Brownell explored the matter about seven months ago and conferred at that time with some individuals.

Investigation—A reporter told Mr. Eisenhower that he (the newsman) has been having trouble getting information from the Justice Department about the operation of a nickel ant in Cuba. Two weeks ago the reporter made the same complaint, and the President told him to advise Brownell that he (Eisenhower) sent the newsman to the Justice Department for such information.

Today, Mr. Eisenhower said he had been in touch with the Justice Department and had been advised that the agency's inquiry into the matter is going ahead.

PRESIDENT TELLS
IGNORE DISPUTE

over the new budget now before Congress.

But President Eisenhower is insisting in the strongest possible terms that the Joint Chiefs regard themselves as part of what the President reportedly calls the thin veneer of top Government officials who, he says, cannot conduct themselves as special pleaders. The President has made the same point to the National Security Council, the primary policy-making body in military and foreign strategy.

The President himself has ordered that new missile systems developed by one of the services must be made available to all the other services, which have a need for them.

Meanwhile, Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, the Army's Research and Development Assistant Chief of Staff, jumped into the middle of the Army-Air Force dispute over the virtues of the Nike and Talos guided missiles.

Gavin told a press conference the Talos is "splendid" for use at sea. The Air Force claims it is a far better anti-aircraft missile than the Army's Nike, now in place around American cities and strategic air bases, as the primary defensive weapon. The Air Force wants to substitute the Talos, still an experimental missile, for the Nike.

Gavin said the Nike was "pre-eminently equipped" to do its assigned job. He said a newer version, the Nike B, will have a range comparable to the Talos. He flatly disputed an Air Force assertion that the range of the Talos is such that it is really an interceptor, not an anti-aircraft weapon, and thus falls within Air Force jurisdiction.

TWINING CALLS

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)

—Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff—underlining the "deterrent effect of our long-range striking power"—said today he believes chances are "slight" for an air attack on the United States.

However, Twining said the Russian air force's long-range attack fleet is "becoming an increasing menace" and that "regardless of how strong our deterrent force, we can never be sure that a potential enemy will not attack."

In a speech prepared for the Civil Air Patrol's national board, Twining made no mention of the inter-service rivalry which mushroomed to the surface over the weekend.

Twining said: "The deterrent effect of our long-range striking power has been sufficient to prevent aggression. Yet regardless of how strong our deterrent force, we can never be sure that a potential enemy will not attack."

Twining said the Air Force is building radar detection lines across the northernmost part of this hemisphere because "we are not willing to bet everything that the deterrent will deter."

He said the United States faces the "ever present possibility of an air attack" but that he now feels "the chances of this are slight and we are working to make them even less."

Adm. Burke Denies Split. In New York yesterday, Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, said in a talk with reporters that the Joint Chiefs are basically "pretty much in agreement."

"I think the Air Force and the Army are commencing to realize the importance of naval power in their own operations," Burke said. "We also realize the importance of the Army and the Air Force."

Asked about reports that Air Force critics had referred to aircraft carriers as "sitting ducks," Burke said he knew of "no controversy over carriers." He said the Joint Chiefs are unanimous regarding carriers.

Senator Barry Goldwater (Rep.), Arizona, said in a speech at a Long Island aviation progress dinner last night that inter-service feuding "is a good thing because the more they argue the more they will come to realize that the Air Force must be the strongest service."

Goldwater, a former Air Force pilot, said that "around our Air Force must be built the national strategy." The "threat of massive retaliation" by our Air Force, he said, is the greatest means of preserving peace.

By the United Press. Senator Henry M. Jackson accused Secretary of Defense Wilson of promoting the inter-service controversy by sweeping the Army-Air Force dispute "under the rug."

The Washington Democrat said Wilson's "failure to act" brought about an "inter-service collision" over who has primary responsibility for anti-aircraft missile defense of the nation.

7 DEAD, 2 MISSING AFTER DREDGE SINKS

Nine Others Rescued When Craft Goes Down in Stormy Lake Michigan.

MILWAUKEE, May 23 (AP)—A construction dredge under tow in stormy Lake Michigan foundered and sank early today, taking the lives of seven of the 18 men aboard.

Three of the bodies were recovered immediately; four others within a few hours as Coast Guard boats searched the area about four miles east of Cudahy, a suburb just south of Milwaukee.

The nine survivors were taken ashore aboard the tug James E. Fuzik, which had been towing the heavy dredge in high winds and heavy seas, and hospitalized. The tug and the dredge reportedly belonged to the Fitzsimmons, Connel Dredge and Dock Co. of Chicago. The dredge had been scooping out the bottom of the lake for a power station near the disaster scene.

BODY OF FLAT RIVER AIRMAN WHO DROWNED RECOVERED

The body of Air Force M-Sgt. Forrest R. Mathes of Flat River, Mo., son of Mrs. Charles H. Courtois, 1217 Souland street, was recovered yesterday, along with that of Air Force Capt. J. B. Turner of Billerica, Mass., from Aziscoos Lake in northwestern Maine where the pair drowned last Nov. 21 while on a hunting trip.

Search for the bodies had been delayed because of unfavorable weather. The man, who had been stationed at Hanscom Air Force Base in Bedford, Mass., were missing from a five-day trip when the search was begun in November.

Mathes, 31 years old, had been in military service for 14 years. He has a wife and two children. Funeral services will be in Aurora, Ill., where his wife lives.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON FITNESS OF YOUTH SET

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—A White House conference on "Fitness of American Youth" canceled last September because of President Eisenhower's heart attack, was set up again yesterday.

The White House announced Vice President Nixon has sent out invitations for 130 delegates to attend the new conference at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., June 18 and 19. Mr. Eisenhower plans to attend on the second day.

The conference, with Nixon scheduled to preside, originally was planned for Sept. 27 and 28 last year at Lowry Air Force Base, near Denver. The meeting will seek the views of representatives of sports, youth and other interested groups on how to make American boys and girls healthier.

U.S. JUDGE HALTS MOVE TO DEPORT CUBA'S EX-LEADER

MIAMI, Fla., May 23 (AP)—A United States district judge put the brakes on deportation of a former Cuban president, saying "every man is entitled to know what he is accused of." Judge Emmet Choate granted a writ of habeas corpus yesterday to Carlos Prio Socarras, and gave the Department of Justice five days in which to specify its grounds for excluding Prio Socarras as allegedly prejudicial to this country's best interests.

Prio Socarras denies accusations by President Fulgencio Batista of Cuba that he has fomented recent uprisings against the Cuban government. He says he once was active in efforts to upset the government of Batista—who deposed him in 1952—but now favors changes in government by peaceful means. Judge Choate questioned the right of the United States Attorney General to delegate power in the case to the regional immigration commissioner at Richmond, Va., where the exclusion order was announced. The judge said "no underling should pass on such an important matter. The Attorney General should do it."

New Generator Planned. day for a preliminary permit
WASHINGTON, May 23 (UP)—Alabama Power Co., Birmingham, Ala., applied yesterday for a preliminary permit to build a new generating plant on the Black Warrior river in Tuscaloosa county, Ala.

5000 VOTE TO STRIKE AT 2 PLANTS HERE

Fisher Body and Chevrolet
Production Workers Charge
Speedup.

Five thousand production workers of the Fisher Body and Chevrolet plants voted overwhelmingly yesterday to strike in protest against an alleged "speedup" on the production line, officers of Local 25, United Auto Workers, reported today.

Five days must elapse before the international union can authorize a walkout, under terms of the wage contract, James Blancett, president of Local 25, said. Meanwhile, union grievance committees are scheduled to meet with representatives of the Chevrolet plant today and with Fisher Body Co. representatives on Friday in an effort to settle the dispute.

The union contends that production was not reduced proportionately after the two plants, at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue, laid off 1200 men April 27. Hourly production was cut back 17 machines following the layoff, Blancett said.

Approximately 350 men have since been recalled and production has been stepped up from 42 to 47 passenger automobiles an hour on two shifts, Blancett charged that management so far has not given serious consideration to the union grievance.

HEADS VESTAL LABORATORIES

Frank J. Pollnow Jr. has been appointed president of Vestal Laboratories Inc., it was announced today. Formerly executive vice president of the firm, Pollnow succeeds his father, Frank J. Pollnow Sr., founder of the chemical specialties manufacturing company.

The new president, who lives at 46 Godwin lane, Ladue, is chairman of the Industrial Division of Association of American Soap and Glycerine Producers and a past director of Chemical Specialties Manufacturers Association.

INDIAN TRIBES COMPENSATED

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The house has passed and sent to the White House a bill to provide for distribution of $4,160,803 among members of the three affiliated tribes of the Ft. Berthold reservation in North Dakota in compensation for property taken for construction of the Garrison dam and reservoir and for other damages. Also, a House-Senate Conference Committee has approved a $5,000,000 income tax-free payment to the Crow Indians of Montana for the site of the proposed Yellowstone dam.

AIRMAN IS SHOT IN DOWNTOWN ROW; MAN HELD

Assailant in Confession
Explains He Thought
Sergeant Followed Him to Car.

Staff Sgt. Robert O. Adams of Scott Air Force Base was in serious condition at City Hospital today with a gunshot wound of the abdomen suffered shortly before midnight on a parking lot on Sixth street between Market and Chestnut streets.

Police arrested Samuel A. Lewis, 3952 North Twentieth street, a truck driver, who has admitted the shooting, they reported.

In a signed statement, Lewis said he had been visiting taverns in the area and had gotten into a dispute at a bar on North Broadway between Pine and Chestnut streets, from which he was ejected. He said he got into another quarrel on the sidewalk in front of the tavern and was knocked down.

Going to his automobile on the parking lot, Lewis said he thought he was being followed by Sgt. Adams who was in civilian clothing. He quoted Adams as asking: "Do you want trouble?"

"I became excited," Lewis continued. "I knew I had a .38-caliber revolver in the glove compartment of my car. I took it out and started to face the man. The gun fired because of my nervousness."

Lewis was arrested as he was attempting to enter his machine and drive away. He explained he was leaving to summon police.

Sgt. Adams, whose home is in Christopher, Ill., suffered a wound of the lower abdomen. He is 28 years old and attached to the headquarters section at Scott Air Base. He has been unable to make a statement.

Police confirmed that Lewis had visited the North Broadway tavern and had been in a belligerent mood.

MORE FIRMS COME TO CITY THAN LEAVE, KAUFMANN SAYS

Approximately twice as many plants and businesses moved into the St. Louis area than moved out in the last five years, Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis.

Addressing a joint meeting of North St. Louis service clubs at Fairgrounds Hotel, Kaufmann urged the groups to take an "increasingly active interest in community affairs and to become the community's principal boosters."

Kaufmann called on club members "to refute persons who imply St. Louis is losing its industry or otherwise going to the dogs." Those persons are ignoring the fact that in the last two years more than one billion dollars either has been spent or committed for new industry, business expansion and public improvements in the metropolitan area," he added.

DIANA BARRYMORE MAKING COMEBACK AT $30 A WEEK

NEW YORK, May 23 (UP)—Diana Barrymore, 35-year-old daughter of the late John Barrymore, said yesterday she hopes to make a comeback on the Broadway stage after opening this week in a $30-a-week starring role in a Greenwich Village playhouse.

Miss Barrymore co-stars with Muriel Rein, who played the first Carmen Jones on Broadway, in "The Ivory Branch," which opens tomorrow night. It is the first stage appearance in New York for Miss Barrymore in 10 years.

"I was drinking too much," Miss Barrymore admitted freely, as she has in frank interviews several times before. "I spent January and February in a private sanitarium, and I'm on the wagon now."

She now is writing her autobiography in collaboration with Gerold Frank.

"I'm telling everything in it," she said. "But I'd like to point out that this so-called comeback of mine is not from 'id Row. I may have been a bad girl but I never hit the Bowery."

NAVY HAS NO OBJECTIONS TO OFFICER IN PRIMARY

WASHINGTON, May 23 (UP)—The Navy said yesterday it has no objection to Lt. Raymond G. Chote's running in the Democratic primary for nomination for Congressman from California's Twenty-third District.

Chote has assured the Navy Bureau of Personnel, a spokesman said, that he will make every effort to "avoid all activities which might possibly be construed or implied as active campaigning on his part."

The spokesman pointed out that Navy regulations allow an officer on active duty to have his name "presented to voters" in primary campaigns. But the regulations do not allow active campaigning or any other personal electioneering activity.

Judicial Nomination. WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—President Eisenhower yesterday nominated Chief Judge Frederick G. Hamley of the Washington State Supreme Court to be United States Circuit Judge for the Ninth Circuit, which covers a number of western states as well as Alaska and Guam.

SHINTO OFFICIALS INDICTED IN DEATH OF 124 JAPANESE

NIIGATA, Japan, May 23 (AP)—The Niigata procurator's office yesterday indicted four officials of the Iyahiko Shinto shrine on charges of involuntary manslaughter in the New Year's stampede in which 124 were killed.

Thousands of worshippers stampeded when the priests threw out traditional lucky rice cakes to celebrate the New Year. A retaining wall gave way and hundreds spilled three and four deep from a raised platform.

The procurator's office said the Shrine officials "failed to take adequate measures to prevent possible disaster." Trial date will be set later. Niigata is a port city on the Sea of Japan about 160 miles northwest of Tokyo.

Texas Democratic Delegation Pledged to Support Johnson

Presidential Boom Gets Boost at Dallas Convention—Moderates Firmly in Control.

The New York Times News Service, Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.

DALLAS, Tex., May 23—Texas Democrats named a national convention delegation led by Senator Lyndon B. Johnson yesterday and pledged to support him for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The formality at the Democratic state convention was a sequel to the capture of the state party organization at precinct and county conventions early this month by the liberal-labor wing of the party led by Senator Johnson and Representative Sam Rayburn, Speaker of the House.

Two unscheduled episodes spiced the conclave of 4000 partisans at the Dallas fair grounds auditorium and heightened the significance of the occasion.

15-Minute Demonstration.

The impetus of the hitherto unspectacular Johnson-for-President movement was underscored when delegates, only an hour after the convention opened, digressed to indulge in a 15-minute spasm of parading, singing and whooping in national-convention style.

Secondly, the Johnson-Rayburn philosophy of "moderation," aimed at reconciliation and unification of the schismatic Democrats, triumphed in its first showdown with "liberal" faction eager to shape party policies.

The "liberal" faction sought to oust the incumbent 37-member state executive committee composed of members of the defeated conservative party wing headed by Gov. Allan Shivers. The committee two-year term runs until September.

Johnson and Rayburn had urged that this be respected, in the name of "fair play and decency" and party harmony. In a roll-call vote the "moderates" won by 1536 to 524 votes.

Leading Southern Hopeful.

Johnson, Senate majority leader, is one of the leading southern possibilities for presidential or vice-presidential nomination.

Aside from his personal fortunes, Johnson's leadership of the 56-vote Texas delegation, sixth ranking convention bloc, will bring a new element of harmony to the party.

In 1952, Shivers refused to support the national convention's presidential nominee, Adlai E. Stevenson, and led the party defection which put Texas in the Republican column.

Johnson and Rayburn made party loyalty the central issue in the intraparty battle with Shivers this year, and carried the day.

Consolidation of the liberal-laborist wing in party dominance was accompanied by elaborate gestures of reconciliation. In addition to his stand against ousting the "Shivers" executive committee, Johnson urged that the handful of pro-Shivers county delegations be recognized. Excluding such minority delegations on some pretext is a common Texas practice.

The liberal-laborist wing had more than 1600 of the 1900 votes at the convention.

Texas G.O.P. Urges Local Solution of Desegregation.

HOUSTON, Tex., May 23 (AP)—Texas Republicans instructed a 54-member delegation to the G.O.P. national convention yesterday to seek a party platform plank proposing that desegregation be left to local school boards and courts.

The convention, as expected, ordered its delegation to support President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon for reelection.

The convention also adopted a resolution declaring its "uncompromising determination that the Republican party of Texas shall remain aggressively true to the principle of states rights."

Another resolution endorsing the revised version of the Bricker amendment drew approval but, like desegregation, failed to produce floor debate as anticipated.

The resolutions committee debated the two proposals at length before approving the desegregation resolution 13 to 6, and the Bricker amendment, 16 to 3.

EX-RED ADMITS HE GOT PASSPORT BY SUBTERFUGE

Told U.S. He Was Going to France or England. Actually Went to Moscow.

WASHINGTON, May 23 (UP)—A former Communist told House investigators today he got a passport in 1951 by telling the State Department he was going to France and England. He actually went to Moscow.

William Wallace, Mount Vernon, N. Y., a Negro, then secretary of the United Electrical Workers Union district four (New Jersey and New York) also told the House Committee on Un-American Activities that the union paid for the trip.

Wallace testified that he was a member of the Communist party from 1949 to November 1955. But from 1952 to November 1955, he said, he also was an undercover agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Wallace said 18 persons—some Communists and some not—were selected for the Moscow trip by the "American Committee to Survey Labor Conditions in Europe."

Told to Use Pressure. Instructions on how to get passports, Wallace said, were given by Charlie Velson, New York, secretary of the committee.

Velson told them to apply for passports 10 or 12 days before trip time so the State Department would have only limited time to investigate. Wallace said, and then to start pressure to get the passports issued.

Velson instructed them also to state they were going to France or England for health, pleasure or business, and not to recognize each other until they arrived in France although all traveled on the same plane, Wallace said.

Wallace said they got visas for Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia from the Soviet embassy in Paris.

Wallace said the group arrived in Moscow in time for May Day, had a special box for the Red Square ceremonies, and later visited factories and farms on "guided tours so we couldn't stray off on our own."

During the visit, Wallace said he made a speech to the Central Labor Council in which he blamed the United States Government for the problems affecting Negroes and charges that the Government was against labor. Others made speeches along the same line to other groups, he said.

Representative Francis E. Walter (Dem., Pennsylvania), chairman of the committee, said earlier that Communists and Soviet agents have fraudulently obtained passports by "concealment and by misrepresentation."

4 CHILDREN LEAVE ROOM JUST BEFORE AUTO CRASHES IN

A runaway automobile in which the brakes had failed crashed into the brick home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Chauvin Jr., 970 St. Patrice lane, Florissant, last night. It scattered debris over a corner of the living room from which the four small Chauvin children had been called to dinner just five minutes before.

The machine belongs to Mrs. Eugene F. Stacy, 3 Woerther drive, Ballwin, who had parked it up the block, at the crest of a steep hill in the 1000 block of St. Patrice and gone to visit a friend. The emergency brake did not hold.

The car was deflected as it grazed one parked in the Chauvins' driveway. The runaway car made a hole three feet wide and six feet high in the wall.

HEADS ENGINEERS GROUP

Henry J. Buelt, bulk plant manager at Secony Mobil Oil Co., has been elected chairman of the St. Louis section of the Society of Automotive Engineers. It was announced today. He succeeded Clifford Feiler.

Chosen vice chairman of the organization was Gene Kropf, assistant to the Dean of Parks College of St. Louis University. Both newly-elected officers will take office in September to serve until next May.

YEAR FOR DRIVER CUT TO $100 FINE

He Also Had Been Assessed $500 on Leaving Scene Charge—Appealed Penalty.

A year's sentence in the workhouse and a $500 fine, assessed against a drive in police court for leaving the scene of an accident, was reduced to a $100 fine yesterday by a jury in the court of criminal correction.

Police Judge Robert G. Dowd had assessed the maximum penalty against Frank J. Sweeney, a Pine Lawn truck driver, last April 11. Sweeney's automobile collided with another machine at Grand boulevard and Chouteau avenue on March 5. In the new trial on Sweeney's appeal, before a jury in the court of Judge Louis Comerford, passengers in the second car testified they were westbound in Chouteau and had the electrical signal in their favor when the side of the car was struck by Sweeney's automobile northbound in Grand. The second car ran up on the curb and injured a pedestrian. Sweeney was charged only with leaving the scene of an accident involving property damage. Police testified Sweeney told them when he surrendered at the Pine Lawn police station that he had parked his car about 150 feet west of Grand on Chouteau and entered a nearby restaurant where he bought some beer to "quiet his nerves." They also said he admitted having had some beer earlier. They testified about 45 minutes elapsed before the wreckage was cleared from the scene.

In his own defense, Sweeney testified the light was in his favor as he started across the intersection and that the other car ran the red light.

Explaining he had been dazed and made ill by the accident, he said he parked his car and entered a restaurant at the intersection where he remained about 15 minutes. On leaving the restaurant, he said, he found both the automobiles and the other parties gone.

He said he called his wife and went home to the 6200 block of Dardanelle avenue by public transportation. On arriving, he said he learned police were seeking him. He then went to the Pine Lawn police station and surrendered.

Judge Comerford, acting under a new statute, permitted Assistant City Counselor William H. Freivogel to show that Sweeney's driver's license had been suspended and he had been fined in police court for driving when intoxicated 11 days before the accident.

FREEING WORLD OF MALARIA MAY COST $200,000,000

GENEVA, May 23 (UP)—It may cost nearly $200,000,000 to eliminate malaria from the world, the World Health Organization said today.

Its malaria report to the ninth World Health Assembly said "substantial progress" had been made in the year since the assembly decided to work for "eradication" instead of mere "control" of the centuries-old disease after discovering that malaria-carrying mosquitoes were becoming resistant to insecticides.

A good deal of international financial and technical aid will be needed in many countries if the target is to be reached in time, it added.

Some $75,000,000 is being spent this year in the 70 countries where malaria still exists—two thirds of it by the governments concerned, $14,000,000 of it from the United States International Co-operation Administration, and the rest from national Children's Emergency Fund.

SENATORS GET DATA ON INCIDENT OF SWING'S MAID

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The Immigration and Naturalization Service reported yesterday federal employees spent very little Government time recruiting a Mexican housemaid for Commissioner Joseph M. Swing.

The Senate Appropriations Committee made public a statement it had received from immigration authorities after the matter of the Mexican maid was raised at an appropriations subcommittee hearing May 10 by Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson of Texas.

At the hearing, Swing was confronted by Johnson with a letter from an immigration agent complaining that Swing had called on subordinates in El Paso, Tex., to help him hire a Mexican girl, then working in a restaurant across the border in Juarez.

The director at the El Paso office said in his statement to the committee that an undercover immigration agent in Mexico spent as much as "3 hours of his own time and an inconsequential amount of government time, during which he was carrying on the government's business."

"No other immigration officials in Washington have immigrated Mexican maids," the report said.

SYMINGTON GETS SOLID BACKING IN CITY, COUNTY

All 3 Congressional Districts Elect National Convention Delegates favoring Him.

Senator Stuart Symington has the support of the 12 St. Louis-St. Louis county delegates to the Democratic national convention, after Democratic meetings in the First and Third congressional districts yesterday named delegates favoring the Missouri Senator for the presidential nomination.

Both congressional district meetings adopted resolutions urging the Democratic state convention, which meets next Monday in Jefferson City, to instruct the Missouri delegation to the national convention to vote as a unit for "favorite son" Symington.

The Second Congressional District meeting of city and county Democrats last Saturday endorsed Symington for the presidency, although that resolution was opposed by a group of county Democrats favoring Adlai E. Stevenson to head the national ticket.

Regular party organization leaders were elected national convention delegates at the two meetings yesterday.

Those named at the First Congressional District meeting, held at First Ward Democratic headquarters, 5470 North Kingshighway, are: City Treasurer John J. Dwyer, chairman of the Democratic City Committee; Leo J. Morrell, Twenty-first Ward committeeman; Roy J. Farrar, Twenty-seventh Ward committeeman, and Mayor Leo Hayes of Wellston, committeeman of Washington township.

Their alternates will be Mrs. Mary M. McDermott, Twenty-sixth Ward committeewoman; Mrs. Ann V. Connors, First Ward committeewoman; Mrs. Margaret Drager, committeewoman of Normandy township, and Mrs. Jennie Jeter.

Third Congressional District delegates elected are: Mrs. Leonard Sullivan, United States Representative from the district; Frederick N. Weathers, Eighteenth Ward committeeman; Mrs. Ann Furst, Ninth Ward committeewoman, and State Representative Joseph W. Martino.

Their alternates will be Sheriff Martin L. Tozer, Twenty-sixth Ward committeeman; Mrs. Hattie Landers, Sixth Ward committeewoman; State Senator John W. Joynt and State Representative Jennie S. Walsh.

St. Louis and St. Louis county will have six votes in the Democratic national convention, which opens Aug. 13 in Chicago. The 12 delegates named from the three congressional districts here will each have one-half vote in the national convention.

AUTO DEALER EARL LINDBURG FILES SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Suit for divorce was filed at Clayton yesterday by Earl C. Lindburg, automobile dealer, against Mrs. Gertrude A. Lindburg, 14 Holiday lane, Frontenac.

The petition, charging general indignities, said they were married Sept. 4, 1943, at Oakland, Calif., and separated last Dec. 27. Lindburg, living at the Congress Hotel, said he would leave to the court to decide custody of the two Lindburg children, Earl C. Jr., 10 years old, and Nancy, 7.

NEBRASKA POWER FUNDS CUT OUT IN RETALIATION

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—An Ohio Congressman said yesterday that he had knocked money for a Nebraska power line out of an appropriation bill because Nebraska's Congressmen generally have voted against public power projects for other states.

Representative Michael Kirwan (Dem.), Ohio, said that as chairman he made the motion that led to the rejection by the House Interior Appropriations subcommittee of a budget request for use of federal funds to build a transmission line from Fort Randall dam on the Missouri river in South Dakota to Grand Island, Nebr.

Kirwan told a reporter that apparently the philosophy of the Nebraska House members was not to give anything to any other state but to grab everything they could for Nebraska.

On six roll calls during consideration of the Interior Department appropriation bill in the Eighty-second Congress, Kirwan said, the Nebraska members voted against public power funds for other states.

"And then they come in here and want us to approve a $9,000,000 transmission line for Nebraska," Kirwan observed.

HOUSE APPROVES 790 MILLION FOR PUBLIC WORKS

'Pork Barrel' Bill Covering River, Harbor and Flood Projects Sent to Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill appropriating $790,758,000 for federal public works projects.

Traditionally known as the annual "pork barrel" bill because it finances construction of scores of river and harbor and flood control projects, the bill won approval by voice vote. Its total is $27,743,000 less than President Eisenhower had requested.

Included are $5,357,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority, $1,378,000 for the Southeastern Power Administration, $1,000,000 for the Southwestern Power Administration, $26,100,000 for the Bonneville Power Administration, $167,612,000 for the Reclamation Bureau, $382,811,000 for the Army Engineers Corps and $6,500,000 for the Army Quartermaster Corps.

Reclamation Construction.
The House voted yesterday to spend $128,745,000 for reclamation project construction in the next fiscal year.

It increased the amount allowed by its Appropriations Committee for the new law authorized Upper Colorado river project from $3,155,000 to $6,000,000.

The Budget Bureau requested $8,000,000 for work on the $760,000,000 Upper Colorado basin development plan during the year starting July 1. However, the committee, in reporting the public works bill Monday, disallowed all money that would go for actual construction. It said contracts could not be let before next summer.

As the House considered the public works bill yesterday, Representative John J. Dempsey (Dem.), New Mexico, offered an amendment to increase the Colorado river fund by adding $2,845,000 for construction. He said this money would be needed to build access roads to the Glen Canyon dam site in northern Arizona and the Flaming Gorge dam site in northern Utah.

Representative John Phillips (Dem.), California, of the Appropriations Committee said that this situation might have been overlooked when the cut was ordered by the committee. He and Committee Chairman Clarence Cannon (Dem.), Missouri, then offered to go along with the amendment. It was passed by a voice vote.

Only Change Accepted.
Dempsey's was the only amendment to the reclamation section of the public works bill that was accepted by the House.

Representative A. L. Miller (Rep.), Nebraska, offered an amendment to earmark $5,500,000 of Missouri Basin project transmission funds for the Fort Randall-Grand Island, Neb., 230-KV power line, but this was ruled out on a point of order. The committee had cut this item from the bill.

Representative Louis C. Rabaut, of Michigan, ranking Democratic member of the Appropriations Public Works subcommittee, said new funds had been denied the Helena valley unit of the Missouri Basin project in Montana because of insufficient repayment contracts.

LONDON CIRCLES DENY PLAN FOR QUEEN TO VISIT RUSSIA

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

LONDON, May 23—There are no plans for a state visit by Queen Elizabeth II to the Soviet Union, informed circles said yesterday.

They were commenting on reports here that such a visit might be in the wind following the exchange of messages between the British sovereign and Kliment Voroshilov, chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

Voroshilov had warmly thanked the Queen for the cordial welcome afforded Premier Bulganin and Communist party secretary Nikita Khrushchev in their recent visit to Britain. The queen reciprocated the Soviet leader's hope that the visit would promote friendly British-Russian relations.

INTOXICATED DRIVER ASKS FOR ARREST, WINS PRAISE

MUSKEGON, Mich., May 23 (AP)—A Holland motorist, who asked to be arrested on charges of intoxication, was dismissed from municipal court yesterday with a suspended $2 sentence and praise for his actions.

"There would be far less accidents and fatalities if more people would do the same thing," said Judge William T. Caughey.

Keith W. Strickland explained at his arraignment: "I thought I was too drunk to drive. That's why I called the police to come and get me."

FREED OF MURDER CHARGE

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 23 (AP)—William H. Gordon, accused of fatally shooting a man who drove past his house blowing a horn, was freed of a murder charge last night. Judge Edward Bauer granted a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal.

Gordon was accused of killing George Weimer, of nearby Waterford, Pa., early the morning of April 15. Assistant District Attorney Edward Doran told the jury Weimer had been in the habit of driving to a girl friend's home, near Gordon's house, and sounding the horn of his auto.

ASSERTS INFLATION FEAR BARS TAX CUT

Armco Steel's Charles R. Hook Discusses Problem of Federal Spending.

Fear of more inflation is one of the chief obstacles to tax reduction this year, Charles R. Hook of Middletown, O., chairman of the board of Armco Steel Corp., said today at a luncheon meeting of the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey at Hotel Statler.

Hook, who served as chairman of the Hoover Commission's Committee on Business Organization of the Defense Department, said governmental leaders "have not learned that expenditures govern taxes."

"We would not be quite so worried about more inflation," he declared, "if fewer Federal dollars had been sent out to compete with private dollars for goods and services. He said the main reason neither tax nor debt can be reduced this year was because of sharp reversal of the downward trend of expenditures."

Calling the Federal spending problem "extremely difficult," Hook told his audience the answer in reducing expenditures is in the Hoover Commission. "It was a relatively few years ago that people who believed in economy were ridiculed and scorned by the spenders for not being able to say precisely where to cut Federal spending," he said. "The two Hoover Commissions have remedied this shortcoming."

"We must not let disagreement over a few of the more controversial recommendations obscure the wonderful documentation we have in the Hoover report for cutting the Federal colossal down to size." The commission, he said, uncovered "scores and hundreds of dramatic examples of confusion, delay, group favoritism and sheer extravagance."

Although a budget surplus estimated up to $2,000,000,000 for the present fiscal year, a tax reduction is not inevitable although it is an election year, Hook stated. "The political tax cut is outweighed by fear of being blamed for helping to rekindle inflation," he said.

NIXON GIVES AWARD TO DOG

WASHINGTON, May 23 (UP)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon yesterday gave a hero's medal to a mongrel dog named Snooks which helped save its mistress's life in a fire last January.

When the home of Mrs. Sidney Mesher here was threatened by fire last winter, Snooks obeyed the orders of its mistress and twice roused a nurse from a fainting spell. The nurse put out the flames.

ANTON BEFFA ESTATE IS VALUED AT $407,501

The estate of Anton Beffa, a contractor of 3 Lucas lane, Belleville Village, was valued at $407,501 in an inventory filed in probate court yesterday at Clayton. Mr. Beffa died last Jan. 31 at the age of 69.

Principal assets included stocks valued at $316,658. The main stocks he held were 496 shares of Abasco Realty & Investment Co., common valued at $146,116, and 496 shares of Anton Realty & Investment Co., common valued at $143,195. Two promissory notes valued at a total of $42,377 were listed with a partnership in Anton Beffa Sons, 2600 Dayton street, valued at $48,204.

In his will he directed that his real estate holdings, including his home, be left to his brothers, Harvey Beffa, executive vice president and general manager of Falstaff Brewing Corp., and Harry Beffa. The remainder of the estate was left in trust to his brothers' seven sons and daughters. Anton Beffa was a bachelor.

BANK CASHIER CHARGED IN $300,000 SHORTAGE

SUMTER, S. C., May 23 (AP)—Cashier Clarence Drayton Cooper Jr., of the National Bank of South Carolina, is free on $10,000 bond while awaiting a hearing on a charge of intent to defraud, filed yesterday.

The FBI said Cooper told them he collaborated with the late O. B. Nettles of Sumter "a number of years ago" in taking numerous small amounts from the bank's United States Government bond account. Nettles died in a plane crash in October 1954. He had been a teller in the bank.

A $300,000 shortage was discovered Saturday after an audit of the bank's accounts. The FBI complaint charges that Cooper made or was caused to make false entries in the bank's daily statement. He had been cashier for 15 years and a member of the board of directors since 1952. He joined the bank in 1929.

Truman Denies Saying Salerno Assault Was 'Squirrel Headed'

Reporter Insists Quote Was Accurate—
Ex-President 'Sorry About Embarrassing Situation.'

NAPLES, Italy, May 23 (AP)—Harry S. Truman disclaimed today the comments attributed to him concerning the Anzio-Salerno beachhead—and added he is embarrassed about the whole affair.

Reporters accompanying Truman on his tour through Italy quoted him yesterday as saying the two World War II landings were unnecessary "and planned by some squirrel-headed general," not named.

These developments followed: 1. Truman's secretary said the former President made "a complete denial" of the quotations attributed to him yesterday. Fred Zussy, Associated Press correspondent who filed yesterday's story, said Truman's comment "was reported exactly as he said it." A reporter for the United Press filed a similar story, and also stood by it today.

2. President Eisenhower said he and his wartime staff did not favor carrying out the Anzio beach landing exactly as it was done, but that he does not think it can be called a failure.

Truman Speaks to Reporters. Truman himself spoke to reporters several hours after his secretary had issued the denial.

"I would make no comment like that," said Truman, referring to the quotations attributed to him.

"I had been listening to the conversation of several people who had been there. I am sorry about it. It's a very embarrassing situation and I hope you'll clear it up."

In his original account of Truman's remarks, the A.P. correspondent accompanying the former President quoted him as saying he didn't know who planned the Italian landings but "there were a lot of easier places that could have been picked."

Secretary's Statement. Eugene Bailey, secretary to the former President, told Zussy today: "The President makes a complete denial of the quoted statement that he termed the Salerno and Anzio landings 'totally unnecessary and planned by some squirrel-headed general.' That was not the President's statement. He never told you that."

Zussy, a Milwaukee native who has been a journalist since 1937 and an AP foreign correspondent for seven years, said: "My quotes were copied while the President was talking to me and are precisely as recorded. Both in my memory and in the notes written down word by word as he spoke the quotes are as reported."

The former President's remarks stirred up a storm of criticism in the United States and Britain, since Allied casualties at both battles were heavy.

Bailey told Zussy that Truman had talked earlier yesterday with Michael Chiniago of International News Service and that "those were Chiniago's words to the President."

"It could not be true that the President told you that—he must have said that was what Chiniago had told him," Bailey said.

Zussy's Reply. Zussy said: "Mr. Truman made the statement flatly and without attribution. Both my memory and my notes recorded as he spoke attest to that. Another correspondent who came up and overheard part of the remark heard and also quoted the 'squirrel-headed' phrase."

"After we had finished, the President said in passing 'You can talk to Mike Chiniago—he was here then,' but Mr. Truman said nothing at all to indicate in any way that the phrase he expressed without attribution were other than his own."

Asked for comment, Chiniago said today: "I never told the President that the Salerno landings were totally unnecessary or had been planned by some squirrel-headed general. I did talk to him about the landing itself. I made the landing with the troops."

Briton Defends Landings. Lt. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese, who commanded Britain's Eighth Army in the Italian campaign, had this reply to the initial Truman report: "The man is talking absolute nonsense. To land on the most obvious beaches would have been suicide."

The American-British troops were commanded by Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark as part of the Fifteenth Army group under British Gen. Harold R. L. G. Alexander, now Field Marshal Viscount Alexander. Alexander was not available today for comment.

Truman, touring Europe with Mrs. Truman, was a United States Senator from Missouri when the battles of Salerno and Anzio were fought by invading American and British troops in 1943-44.

Project of Churchill. The battles of Salerno and Anzio resulted from a United States-British decision to knock Italy out of the war, a pet project of Winston Churchill, then British Prime Minister.

President Eisenhower told his press conference today he and his staff considered plans for the Anzio beach landing and did not favor carrying out the operation exactly as it was done. He added he does not think the controversial operation can be called a failure.

Asked who planned the Anzio operation, Mr. Eisenhower replied with a laugh that the answer would be a long story. He went on to say the Italian coast landing was proposed before he left the Mediterranean to become supreme commander of Allied forces. He said he and his staff considered it from a technical standpoint and did not favor the operation being carried out in the particular way that it was.

As it turned out, however, Mr. Eisenhower said, the invasion was a holding action that kept large numbers of German troops occupied in Italy when otherwise they would have been fighting on the Western front.

G.M. WILL LAY OFF 4500 MORE WORKERS

Brings Total to 50,000—
Auto Unemployed Now
164,000.

DETROIT, May 23 (UP)—The ranks of the nation's unemployed will be swelled by at least 4500 more workers this week because of additional auto production cutbacks at two General Motors Corp. divisions.

The latest slashes were reported yesterday by the Chevrolet and Fisher body divisions. Chevrolet said it planned to release 2500 workers Friday at its 32 plants across the nation. Fisher Body said it laid off 2000 workers Monday at 15 of its 35 plants. On Monday, G.M.'s Pontiac division laid off another 500 employees.

A G.M. spokesman said lay-off figures at the auto firm's other divisions were not immediately available.

The laid-off workers will increase the nation's automotive unemployment rolls to an estimated 164,000. Of this figure, at least 50,000 are from the G.M. work force. The 50,000 figure was given by G.M. President Harlow Curtice but the United Auto Workers union estimated G.M.'s layoffs at closer to 60,000.

Tomorrow, the UAW will open a meeting here of its General Motors locals national council to discuss the unemployment situation in the auto industry.

And on Sunday, a mass meeting of the industry's unemployed will be held here. The turnout was called by Pat Quinn, vice president of the UAW's Local 3.

Quinn said his union planned to ask a huge federal works program to aid the unemployed workers.

Spokesmen for the auto industry blamed the unemployment on a "poorer-than-expected" 1956 auto market but UAW President Walter P. Reuther claimed it was "reckless" production in 1955 which ruined this year's new car market.

By the Associated Press.
Three of the four Cleveland area Ford plants will be shut down for two days after Memorial day next week.

After the holiday Wednesday, the 7500 hourly paid employees will not work Thursday Friday. Ford Motor Co. officials announced yesterday. Work will resume Monday, June 4.

PROBLEMS OF ALCOHOLISM TO BE DISCUSSED TONIGHT

Alcoholism in the St. Louis area, representing a problem involving an estimated 35,000 to 40,000 individuals and an annual community cost of $18,000,000, is to be discussed tonight at a meeting of the Committee for Education on Alcoholism of Greater St. Louis. It is to be held at St. Louis County Health Center at 8 o'clock.

Estimate of the amount of alcoholism in this community was given by Dr. Joseph B. Kendis, chairman of the committee. In calling the meeting, Dr. Kendis said that "almost nothing" has been done by the community to combat alcoholism.

William Plunkert, of New York, associate director of the National Committee on Alcoholism, will describe efforts to combat alcoholism in other communities. Speakers also will include Dr. George Ulett, director of Malcolm Bliss Hospital, advisor to the local committee.

VOLCANO ERUPTS IN OCEAN BETWEEN HAWAIIAN ISLES

HONOLULU, May 23 (UP)—An underwater volcanic upsurge broke the ocean surface between the Hawaiian islands of Oahu and Kauai yesterday.

Aerial observers saw boiling water, steam, volcanic ash and sulphur fumes in the ocean channel some 40 miles northwest of Honolulu.

The strange disturbance was reported by observers in at least four planes, military and commercial.

96 Convicts Volunteer for Live Cancer Injections for Research

Study at Ohio State Penitentiary Seeks to Find How Healthy Body Kills Off Diseased Cells.

The New York Times News Service, Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.

NEW YORK, May 23—Ninety-six convicts in the Ohio state penitentiary have volunteered for live cancer injections to help medical scientists try to solve the causes of the disease. This was believed to be the first time convicts had been asked to serve as test tube "combatants" in the war on cancer.

It was disclosed yesterday that a call for volunteers had been issued last Saturday in the Columbus prison. They were sought for a special project to determine, if possible, how cancer cells could be killed off. Research officials asked for 25 volunteers and 96 responded.

The project in the prison will be conducted by the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research.

search—the research unit of the Memorial Center for Cancer and Allied Diseases in New York—and the department of medical research of Ohio State University.

It was emphasized that the volunteers were facing no grave danger since any cancer injection that "took" would spread slowly and could be removed surgically.

Live cancer cells can be transferred from one person to another, and in the person who already has cancer the injected cancer cells will live and grow. In the person who does not have cancer, however, the transplanted cells will die after a short period of growth.

The problem that will be put under study in the prison project is how the normal individual fights off the cancer injection.

ROXANA (ILL.) STUDENT WINS ATLANTIC TRIP WITH ESSAY

Kenneth E. Schubert, a junior at Roxana, Ill. High School, yesterday received a certificate for a trip between New York and Mediterranean ports after being named winner in an essay contest sponsored by the St. Louis area branch of the Propeller Club of the United States.

The award was presented at a Maritime Day luncheon held at the Mark Twain Hotel, Schubert, 322 Doerr avenue, Roxana, submitted the winning essay on the importance of inland and deep-sea water carriers in the American economy.

Two other Roxana high school students and two from St. Louis county high schools will receive trips aboard Mississippi river towboats for their essays. They are Gail Ellis, 113 St. Clair street, Roxana; Carol J. Hinkle, 177 Lindenwood street, East Alton; Jean Luedde, 1026 Yale avenue, Richmond Heights; and Beverly Fawcett, 1021 Lakeview avenue, Spanish Lake, of Hazelwood High School.

SENATE UNIT OK'S WHITTAKER FOR APPEALS COURT BENCH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23—A Senate Judiciary subcommittee today approved the nomination of Judge Charles E. Whittaker of Kansas City, Mo., for the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals bench.

Whittaker is a United States District Judge for the Western District of Missouri and was nominated for the appeals court by President Eisenhower last March.

The nomination now will be considered by the full Judiciary Committee. Approval there is practically certain. The nomination then would go to the Senate for final action.

Whittaker would fill the appeals court vacancy created by the death of Judge John Caskie of Kansas City.

PIZZA PIE IN HAPPY LANDING
DETROIT, May 23 (AP)—A large pizza pie cushioned the head-first fall of a 10-year-old boy from a moving automobile here.

The youngster, William Shelhart, was holding the pie when the drive made a sharp turn. The car door flew open. The boy fell head-first, landed on the pizza and skidded across the paved street. His only injury was a bruised knee.

Footprints.
BOISE, Idaho (AP)—When police found a barefooted man in a parked car, they knew what to do.

They compared a shoe they had found a few minutes before in an alley while investigating a jewelry store burglary with a shoe in the car. They said the shoes matched.

The barefoot man and his companion are charged with first degree burglary. They gave the names of Joseph Ward and Marsh Fisher, air-men from Mountain Home Air Force Base.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—It was too hot for two pairs of pants.

A theft suspect began sweating profusely when being questioned at the police station. Officers became suspicious and asked him to disrobe. He was wearing two pairs of pants. One was a new pair just reported stolen from a downtown department store.

BYRD SAYS FHA HAS NOT CLOSED DOOR ON CHEATS

Elements That Breed Scandals Still Persist, Senator Warns Eisenhower.

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Senator Harry F. Byrd (Dem., Virginia), said today he has told President Eisenhower "the elements which breed housing scandals still persist" in the Federal Housing Administration.

He made public a letter to Mr. Eisenhower saying reports by the General Accounting Office show "irregularities and inefficiencies" in FHA offices in New York City, Kansas City and Cleveland, and in 22 slum clearance projects in 15 cities. Byrd did not indicate there was evidence of graft.

Byrd also made public letters he has sent to Albert M. Cole asking for "confirmation or denial" of the GAO reports, and a report on what Cole is doing about them. Cole is administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, parent of the FHA.

Letters Acknowledged.
Byrd acted as chairman of the Senate-House committee on reduction of non-essential expenditures. He also made public routine replies from the White House and Cole acknowledging his letters and promising fuller replies later.

"While the four reports are directed to the administration of only a small portion of the vast federal housing programs," Byrd wrote Mr. Eisenhower in a letter dated May 16, "as far as they go they clearly show that the elements which breed housing scandals still persist."

The allusion was to a series of 1954 hearings by the Senate Banking Committee and other groups which produced evidence of irregularities in two main housing programs.

One was home repair loans. There was testimony that many home owners were cheated by fast-talking salesmen whose firms then turned out shoddy work.

Windfall Cases.
The other concerned a post-war apartment program widely called section 608 projects. A number of project sponsors were disclosed to have obtained FHA-insured mortgages far exceeding their actual costs and pocketing the difference. The Government has filed recovery suits in many of these "windfall" cases.

In the 1954 hearings, the Administration fired a number of FHA officials.

The abstract of GAO reports which Byrd made public quoted that agency as saying in a statement dated March 23 a "windfall" profit had gone to Alfred Kaskel, sponsor of the Park City housing project in New York City.

Kaskel, the abstract said, "is among those on FHA's own blacklist of (section) 608 sponsors developed as a result of previous federal housing scandals."

The GAO said that in the New York City office "generally the (project) sponsors' financial statements were accepted without verification," and that so were the cost estimates for many projects.

Kansas City Projects.
In Kansas City, the GAO said, it found that underwriting personnel "did not understand the method" for determining the true value of rental properties.

Improper valuations, GAO said, could drive property values in a city up or down, according to the degree and trend of error.

GAO also accused the Kansas City office of having approved FHA-insured multiple family housing projects on "undesirable" locations, some in the same block where substandard housing already was located.

It accused FHA officials in Cleveland of having first set a value for some projects, then worked out a formula to justify the figure.

The report also alleged some "questionable handling" of a loan for the Warren Co-op Homes, Inc., in Warren, Ohio.

The report assailed the handling of many slum clearance-urban renewal projects, declaring it found many "weaknesses and deficiencies" in administration and inadequate planning.

Minnesota has been passed by the Senate. It would increase by 15,000 acres the lands in the roadless area which may be acquired by the Government. Much of this land is used for commercial resort purposes.

In addition, the measure would increase from the present $500,000 to $2,500,000 the amount authorized to be appropriated for the acquisition of land. The Superior roadless area includes about 1,000,000 acres. It is an area of lakes, forests and streams. Last year an estimated 70,000 canoeists visited the area.

Open Clash of Armed Services Inevitable and Desirable After Smoldering Under 'Hush' Policy

Eisenhower Administration's Emphasis on 'Going Along' Rather Than Arguing
Out Differences Built Up Situation That Got Out of Hand.

By JAMES RESTON

Times News Service
(Copyright 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, May 23.

THERE has been so much emphasis on "teamwork" in the Eisenhower Administration the last three years that the automatic official response to any outbreak of public bickering within the Cabinet or the armed services is to hush it up or play it down.

These three years, however, have seen such a revolution in military weapons and tactics, such a change in the location and even in the nature of power, and such a political convolution in the area from the Aleutians to Gibraltar that controversy was not only inevitable but in many ways highly desirable.

Such has been the effect of such developments as the guided missile, the A-bomb and H-bomb, the nuclear submarine, the supersonic fighters, and all the families of weapons going with these things that responsible military leaders believe that warfare has changed more dramatically since Eisenhower's Normandy landings in 1944 than it did between Appomattox and Normandy.

Consequently, there is not a general staff in any nation in the world that is not involved in solemn debate over the implications of these developments on the traditional roles of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force.

Beyond Tradition.

These are things that move our principal soldiers beyond consideration of service tradition. For example, while the Army's Chief of Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, was still in Korea but knew that he was to be appointed to his present job he devoted a great deal of time to the task of becoming acquainted with the mission of the American Army should be in a period of atomic stalemate.

Gen. Taylor is a philosopher and he did this not primarily from a "parochial" service point of view, but because he was sincerely concerned about the security of this country under present circumstances. This wider motivation has affected many of the men who have high responsibility in the three services.

Washington is not alone in this. For example, the British as well as the Russians are talking about cutting their ground forces. In fact, the British are asking themselves why they should maintain a large mine-sweeping fleet in the Royal Navy to keep the ports open in time of war, when one H-bomb dropped on Liverpool would probably put it out of action as an effective port for months if not for the duration of the war.

Beyond this, the British are even debating whether conventional fighter aircraft are not on the verge of becoming obsolete as new guided missiles come into production.

Political Changes. Meanwhile, in the political field, world politics no longer revolves solely around the poles of Washington and Moscow. Peiping is coming into the act. Japan and Germany are reviving. India is vying with China for the leadership of Asia. President Sukarno of

ATOMIC PILE DRIVING FIRST FULL-SIZED NUCLEAR PLANT

LONDON, May 23 (UPI)—The big atomic pile that will drive the world's first full-sized nuclear electric power plant has started working, the British atomic energy authority announced today.

A brief statement indicated Britain had crossed the first and biggest hurdle in the race to put atomic power to work in everyday life.

The plant, at Calder Hall in northern England, is to be opened formally next October. It will develop 50,000 to 70,000 kilowatts of power—more than 10 times as much as the experimental plant which Russia started two years ago.

STATE OF SIEGE IMPOSED ON THREE CITIES IN HAITI

PORT AU PRINCE, May 23 (UPI)—The government of Haiti announced today it had imposed a "state of siege" on three cities and arrested 35 persons to put a stop to the recent wave of unrest and minor violence. Fifteen students and two policemen have been injured in rioting sparked by opposition leaders who argue that President Paul Magloire's term of office expired May 15.

Magloire said in a radio address the state of siege was imposed on Port au Prince, Jacmel and Aux Cayes to enable the government to apprehend rebel leaders who have been "working in the shadows while criminally exposing unfortunate or innocent people to public force."

The constitution, proclaimed in 1950, the year Magloire came into office, says that his term shall continue to May 15, 1957. His opponents argue the clause is inconsistent with the rest of the charter.

Carriers Too Vulnerable, Air Force Charges

Navy Air Arm Is Inefficient for Strategic Bombing, Document Says.

By ANTHONY LEVIERO

The New York Times News Service
(Copyright 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, May 23.

A Navy Air Force document which became available here concludes that the Navy's giant carriers of the Forrestal class are relatively ineffectual for strategic bombing and vulnerable to air and sea attack. It marshals the air staff's arguments against the carriers under five headings:

1. Offensive capabilities—The carriers would have to go within 100 to 300 miles of the Eurasian land mass in order to strike major Soviet targets.

2. Detection—From 20,000 feet altitude an aircraft radar can detect a carrier 200 miles away; from 35,000 feet it can detect it from 400 miles away.

3. Vulnerability—It would cost Russia approximately 30 times more effort to knock out United States land bases than to destroy the Navy's "floating airbases." Seventeen carriers have about 1190 planes purely for their own defense, or about the same number of planes assigned to protect one-half of the United States.

4. Overseas bases—The Navy fails to note that its carriers, like Air Force units, are also dependent on overseas bases, but if all overseas bases were denied to this country, the heavy bombers of the Air Force could strike at Russia from North America.

5. Mobility—On the day President Truman authorized aid for South Korea, the Air Force destroyed seven North Korean fighters and evacuated 448 Americans. Carrier-based planes of the Seventh Fleet were unable to make their first air strike until six days later. A B-47 wing flew from California to England in 12 hours and was ready to fight on arrival.

Carriers of the Forrestal class displace more than 50,000 tons and cost about $200,000,000 each, exclusive of their aircraft. Two have been commissioned, the Forrestal and the Saratoga. A total of 10 is sought, so that the ships alone would cost approximately two billion dollars.

Each carrier has a complement of 90 to 100 aircraft, about half of them strike bombers and

Army Missiles Under Study

SENATOR STUART SYMINGTON and LT. GEN. JAMES GAVIN, the Army's chief of research and development, looking over models of four Army missiles after Gavin testified yesterday at closed session of Senate Armed Services subcommittee which is to study disputes in the missile program. the rest fighters and reconnaissance planes, according to a Navy spokesman.

Under "offensive capabilities," the Air Force takes as its theme a statement by Secretary of the Navy Thomas last December on the Forrestal's "ability to carry a powerful atomic punch, its ability to take the fight right into the enemy's front yard."

The Air Force answer is: "1.—The most modern long-range carrier aircraft have a reported combat radius of 1500 nautical miles. Study of a world map indicates that to launch an air strike against a majority of important Soviet targets with carrier aircraft of 1500 miles combat radius would require the carrier force to enter one of the following water areas: the Mediterranean, Red sea, Persian gulf, North sea, Norwegian or Barents Seas. It is obvious that these waters are somewhat restricted for naval use with unacceptable hazards from mines, submarines and land-based aircraft.

2.—Carrier aircraft would be able to reach only a few important Soviet targets from carriers operating in either the Arabian sea, Bay of Bengal, Pacific ocean, Sea of Okhotsk, Bering sea, Sea of Japan and the East China and South China seas. In order to strike these targets, the force would have to operate in close proximity to the Eurasian land mass. Most of these areas are restricted waters, easily mined and subject to continuous attack by enemy air or submarine craft.

PEARSON Butler Gives A New Crisis To Democrats

Truman, Others
Angry Over Loss of Convention Organizer.

By DREW PEARSON

(Copyright 1956)

WASHINGTON.

THE Democratic National Committee, already harassed by a bare treasury and bleak chances in November, has thrown a monkey wrench into its own machinery. Neal Roach, who was supposed to arrange for the fast-approaching national convention at Chicago, has just resigned in a personal row with Chairman Paul Butler.

Not only has this thrown plans for the Chicago convention out of gear, but it may result in a drastic reshuffle of the Democratic National Committee.

The situation is so serious that ex-President Truman sent a page-and-a-half cable from Europe protesting against the resignation of Roach.

Leslie Biffle, another party stalwart, also is blazing mad at Butler for letting Roach resign.

Col. Jack Arvey, leader of Democratic forces in Chicago, is irked at Butler for various reasons.

The crisis occurred over a lady—Miss Frances Spivey, Roach's secretary. Butler would not permit Miss Spivey to go to Chicago to work with Roach, and Roach refused to work without her.

He pointed out that organizing a national convention is a job that requires personnel familiar with who's-who in the Democratic party. Roach said he couldn't do the job with a secretary hired in Chicago who didn't know the score. Miss Spivey has handled other conventions, worked long hours in preparing for them.

Chairman Butler said no. It is now the chairman's next move. He has to get someone out to Chicago to start organizing for what will be one of the most important conventions in Democratic history—and he has to do it quickly.

CHILDS Stevenson, Kefauver Hard Put To Find Audience in Florida

Eisenhower's Popularity, Voters' Boredom With Issues, Lack of Governor Race Keep Crowds Small.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

HOLLYWOOD, Fla., May 23.

This sign, stretched over the entrance to the local community center, had drawn about 20 people, young and old, when the Senator arrived toward the end of a long day of campaigning for Florida's 28 delegates. They ate their free hog dogs and baked beans while he spoke, addressing himself primarily to the elderly, the "senior citizens," on the need to increase Social Security payments to the aged and the needy.

In the face of a vast, yawning indifference some bait is necessary to get anyone out to listen. Both Kefauver and Adlai Stevenson are pursuing the voters, running them down at every crossroads and shopping center, every town hall and barber shop. And often their audience seems reluctant to stand still, a little puzzled as to what the fuss is all about.

Kefauver walked through a store in Coral Gables, shaking hands down one aisle and up another. Two women at the brasserie counter were startled to look up and encounter his familiar Jack O'Lantern smile and outstretched hand. On the edge of the little group that gathers, people want to know who it is that is so friendly and smiling.

Phenomenon of Indifference. Less than three months from the Democratic convention and five months from the election in November this is an astonishing phenomenon. There are many reasons for the indifference that seems a part of the warm sunlight of this cluttered playground. Yet the fact that the two leading contenders for the nomination of one of the major parties should virtually have to tie the people down while they talk to them is a curious commentary on the times.

One reason is the fact that there is no run-off primary for the governorship to stir voter interest. For the first time in Florida's history Gov. LeRoy Collins won a clear majority for re-election over four opponents in the recent gubernatorial contest. His opponents used the crudest kind of appeals while Collins championed moderation and respect for law.

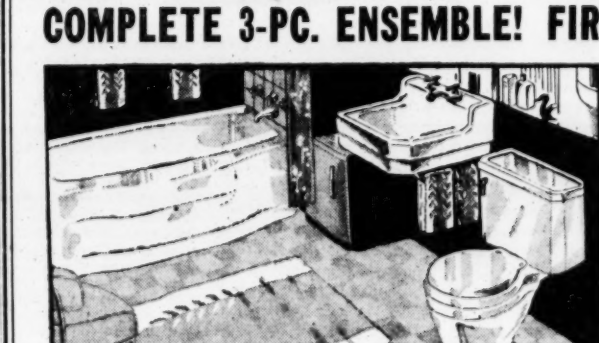

But far more important is the bland assurance expressed in a variety of ways that President Eisenhower is going to win another term in November, no matter what anyone says or does. This being so, there is not much use in both-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Need for Uncle Samuel

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

After our government spent about twelve billion of our hard-earned dollars on research and development, "private enterprise" blithely announced that it was all ready to take over the atom from here on out.

It stoutly maintained that our Uncle Samuel (now that the spade work was done) should quietly step in to take over the remote background. It said it was ready to go, ready to exploit the thing to a fare-thee-well—for private profit, of course.

But a hitch has developed. In the acquisitive scramble, one little item was overlooked. It seems that there is a remote possibility of a nuclear plant's going boom! And if one did, it would go boom in a very big way; there'd be extensive property damage and, quite likely, many deaths and injuries, especially if the plant were near a population center.

So, that's the joker in the deck. With the foregoing in mind, private enterprise is (and just as blithely, mind you) entreating our dear old Uncle Samuel to step back into the picture.

Specifically, it wants him to agree to shoulder the lion's share of the damages in the event of an explosion of a privately-owned nuclear power-plant (but no controls, thank you). Pointedly, the insurance companies have set a limit on what they will underwrite.

Ah, private! Ah, enterprise! THOMAS BRODERICK, Schenectady, N.Y.

Handing Out a Subpena

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A few days ago I was called down to my boss's office and handed a subpoena to appear before the House Un-American Activities Committee. I ask where the ethics were when my boss was brought in on my personal business.

I am a shop steward. The question is: Is the committee doing a job on me for the boss, or is the boss doing a job on me for the committee? I was born, raised and educated in and around St. Louis. Any of my ideas have to be American.

EDWIN L. RICHARDSON

Produced by the 'Links'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

On Friday night I attended a play at the Empress Theater. The play was "The Women" by Clare Boothe Luce and the cast was all Negro. The St. Louis Links produced it to raise funds for the N.A.A.C.P.

My ticket was sold to me by a friend at work. Otherwise I would never have known about it as I saw nothing in your paper announcing it. I cannot believe that the producers didn't notify you.

There were about 1200 people there. The production, directed by Ruth Vinyard, was comparable to many I've seen at the American although the cast had never been on stage before. Negroes in our community who would like to participate in drama have no outlet for their talents.

Surely such an unbiased newspaper as yours could encourage such an important two-fold effort by news announcements. It was impossible to guess that the cast had never been on stage before and I'm sure that many others would have enjoyed this presentation had they only known.

N. J. DENARO

How unfortunate it is that Negroes are not encouraged to do more of this kind of thing in our community.

The Links have certainly displayed much enthusiasm and hard work can be seen in producing a play. I hope they will plan more in the future. The audience reaction would indicate their agreement with me.

Spare the Rod . . .

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

How long do we have to put up with the ridiculous behavior of Dr. Fannie Shattell of Stanford University and her "role playing" theories in our schools? She is an associate professor of education and was in St. Louis last week.

It is precisely because of this kind of gibberish that the country now faces a shortage of scientists, teachers and business executives. Children are not taught to think but to "play roles" in "group consideration".

The function of the school is to teach fundamentals and it is successful only to the degree that it does this. A leading executive has cited the large number of top jobs in industry that are going begging, not because applicants of good character cannot be found (role playing included) but because applicants cannot be found who can use their minds.

I would refer Dr. Shattell to Joan Dunn's recent book, "Retreat From Learning" in which the realities of this kind of permissive, "discipline yes, punishment no," education are manifested in a big city high school.

I say it's Dewey and I say the hell with it! MRS. EDITH MANLEY, Webster Groves.

Speaking of Deals

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The story is going around up here in the country that Frank Lane has traded two beer salesmen and one peanut vendor to Chicago for one bat-boy, and is now working on a deal involving the brewery's Clydesdales.

OGARLAN RICKS, Elsberry, Mo.

I agree with "Fan" who suggested we trade Mr. Lane for a new general manager. But let's make it a "package deal" and send Harry Caray with him.

MRS. W. C. VROMAN

Up to the President

President Eisenhower has put a good face on the wrangling in the Defense Department. Although Secretary of Defense Wilson reported Tuesday that the President is "a bit unhappy" over the erupting jealousies, Mr. Eisenhower himself now says that he "would be frightened if, in these times, there were not good, strong arguments among America's armed services."

In answer to reporters' questions, the President, however, says that "all differences should be studied in a spirit of honest search for the truth and not with any purpose in mind of just seeing whether an interservice fight can be promoted."

Does this mean that President Eisenhower has taken the problem in hand? The country can only hope so. As Commander-in-Chief, Dwight D. Eisenhower is the responsible official under the Constitution. Our basic law makes him the one official who must assume responsibility for military rivalries that waste time and effort and money. In the end the chain of command carries the problem to his desk.

But actually President Eisenhower is accountable in a way that such recent predecessors as Harry S. Truman and Franklin D. Roosevelt were not accountable. The present occupant of the White House is a career soldier. Until a short while before he became President he had known only a military career.

In short, the problem which has burst open in this unseemly struggle between the services for position and prestige, as measured by slices in the vast military budget, is in the field of President Eisenhower's special competence. This is what he knows best. Here is where he has had his training and adult experience.

Yet the appearance is that after more than three years of the Eisenhower Administration the branches of the defense system are as disunited as ever. Seemingly the planning personnel of the Army, Navy and Air Force spend part of their time plotting against each other.

Healthy defense competition, conducted within reasonable bounds, is one thing. Bitter rivalry that loses sight of the primary objective—namely the common defense of the United States—is something else entirely. The first may be defended; the second is inexcusable.

The country needs to know much more about the so-called "staff papers" which were leaked to several newspapers. How much indorsement did these studies enjoy? How far up in the chain of command had they been approved? How did it happen they were released? Was it part of some plan? If so what was the purpose of the move?

As everyone knows, the lion's share of the federal budget goes to the military. This share is so big that an Administration headed by a military expert certainly should cut out all unnecessary overlapping and duplication.

It has been reported, for example, that there are two dozen missile programs. Can any such number be justified? Would not the research and experimentation be more efficient and more productive if these scattered efforts were brought together by the new co-ordinator.

The answer would seem to be Yes. Surely no private business would operate on any such basis as that alleged in the missile program.

Properly enough Congress is going into all this. The Senate Appropriations subcommittee on military affairs, headed by Senator Chavez of New Mexico, will make a study of disagreements. The Armed Services subcommittee, headed by Senator Symington of Missouri, will turn its attention to the missiles and air power aspects of the row.

Meantime the country will expect President Eisenhower to come to grips with this unseemly display of nonco-operation. If the situation is so bad that Secretary Wilson was justified in assembling his unprecedented press conference with all the top military and civilian defense officials on hand, then it is serious enough for the Commander-in-Chief to give it sure, informed, professional attention.

Aldermen and Councilmen Can Help

The St. Louis Board of Aldermen and the County Council will enjoy a fine opportunity in the next few days really to do something about the metropolitan area's transportation problems. Each group of lawmakers will be asked to appropriate $140,000 as its share of the comprehensive transit survey that has been in progress for well over a year. This survey holds out the best hope of intelligent solutions to the area-wide traffic-transit problems. The Missouri State Highway Department has already agreed to finance the $255,000 origin-and-destination phase of the study. All that is necessary now is approval by the Aldermen and the Councilmen. The sooner they say Yes, the sooner the survey can get started—and the sooner they can tell their constituents that experts actually are working on traffic and transit in the St. Louis area.

New Rule-Book for Campaigns

Charles P. Taft, who has spent a good part of his life trying to improve the arena of politics, has induced the two national party chairmen, Republican Leonard Hall and Democratic Paul Butler, to sign a pledge against blows below the belt in the forthcoming campaign. This idea, supported by a group known as the Fair Campaign Practices Committee, Inc., is a good one. It is essential to the health of democracy that election results should stem from facts, not slanders.

The trouble is that it is a bit difficult to say just where the campaigners should wear the belt. The Taft group, in general language, is against personal vilification, character defamation and whispering campaigns. But when does exposure of a bad record or questionable associations become improper vilification? If a clever campaigner uses indirection and insinuation, rather than direct accusation against an opponent will he be charged with defamation? And if he pleads ignorance and denies responsibility for a whispering campaign, what then?

There are solid standards of truth and widely accepted standards of good taste which may be invoked. But as Mr. Taft says, the appeal must be to public opinion—and it will be effective only if opinion is informed. Here a "committee of referees" could be very helpful, provided that press, radio, television and other spreaders of information were fully co-operative.

It would also help if both parties had approximately equal campaign funds at their disposal, and so a roughly equal chance to reach the voters. But the way in which the Senate scuttled the Hennings clean-campaigns bill and then shelved the mild Johnson-Knowland substitute is an indication of how unready many politicians are to improve the rules of office-seeking.

But the need for more ethical, more informative campaigning is so great that it must be met, even if a good many politicians are reluctant to change their ways.

Even if the Taft committee should be only partially successful in policing the 1956 campaign, it will perform a very considerable service if it makes clear to the American electorate the need for a better rule-book.

Slashing Foreign Aid

The Eisenhower Administration has lost the fight for the full amount of its foreign aid request in the House Foreign Affairs Committee, so it must now decide whether or not to carry its appeal to the floor of the House. This decision may be affected by the fact that both Republicans and Democrats voted to cut a billion from the three billions asked for military aid and to reduce the $1,900,000,000 request for economic aid by $109,000,000.

The military cut revolved around a disagreement which should be subject to a factual solution. It was introduced by Republican Representative Fulton of Pennsylvania. He said the Government can use unspent funds to keep its aid program going despite the cut, but the Administration contends it needs the full appropriation to keep the "pipe lines" full.

Happily the cut in non-military aid was less severe but it may be felt all the more because the original request was smaller. The committee might have paid more heed to the speech to Congress last week by Indonesia's President Sukarno. He emphasized that it is non-military help which can win friends for us among the uncommitted nations of Asia and Africa. Having escaped colonial rule, these are eager to solve their economic problems. And they are reluctant to accept military aid which involves commitments to other nations, among them those from which they have only recently won their liberty.

This is a psychological fact which the United States would do well to recognize. As Walter Lippmann points out, we did recognize it before the Korean war. Only in the subsequent half-decade have we demanded firm political and military agreements in return for help. The question is whether this policy really pays.

The United States is under no obligation to help any nation, and it has a right to ask a return for what it gives. But as President Sukarno said, the gift without strings—the gift which betokens a sincere interest in the welfare of the free peoples of Asia and Africa—is the one most likely to pay dividends while the help which seeks to tie these peoples into our system is more likely to be resented.

Who's Best at the Wheel?

Motorists who follow the battle of the sexes along the state highways and city streets may have some definite judgment on the results of the Missouri Highway Patrol's high school drivers' contest, but all we can say is that we are surprised.

According to our automotive folklore, our mechanically-minded high school boys ought to be superior to the girls in tests of driving skill, if not in tests of safety, but they were not. The boys did better than the girls in parking and finding their bumpers in relation to fixed objects, but the girls made smoother stops and produced a higher score in driving along a straight line.

Highway experts point out that many traffic violations involve driving on the wrong side of the road, so presumably the girls are better drivers than the boys because they drive straight—providing they do not drive straight down the middle of the road. But the only safe conclusion from the patrol's tests is that all the contestants were good drivers or they would not have survived for the final round. So a clarion ab-hoga for the high school drivers' schools.

Douglas on the Finance Committee

The assignment of Senator Douglas of Illinois to the Senate Finance Committee seat vacated by the late Alben Barkley is most appropriate.

In the first place, Senator Douglas is an economist—the one professional student of the science of economics among the 96 Senators. His long service in teaching and research at the University of Chicago was highly lauded by his colleagues when they chose him president of the American Economics Association for 1947. Long before he was elected to the Senate in 1948, he was perhaps the pre-eminent expert on the international experience in the fields of social security, unemployment compensation and related matters. He helped draft much of the legislation in these important fields.

A second reason for assigning Senator Douglas to the Finance Committee is that it broadens substantially the outlook of the Committee. This can be seen from a glance at the membership. The other Democrats are Senators Byrd (Va.), George (Ga.), Kerr (Okla.), Frear (Del.), Long (La.), Smathers (Fla.) and Johnson (Tex.). The Republican side is no less orthodox: Millikin (Colo.), Martin (Pa.), Williams (Del.), Flanders (Vt.), Malone (Nev.), Carlson (Kan.) and Bennett (Utah).

Senator Douglas will not be able to outvote a committee so heavily weighted with deep-devised conservatism in financial matters, but from now and as long as he is on the committee, the country can be assured that progressive economic views will be capably presented in committee.

Still another reason why the Douglas appointment is welcome is that it gives the Finance Committee its only Middle Western Democrat. It is time a committee so important admitted a non-Southerner or two on the majority side.

The Lost Man-Hours in Marx

One of our contemporaries reports some interesting data on the habits of students. The newspaper is Zarya Vostoka, or Dawn of the East, a daily jointly published by the Communist party and the government of the Georgian Soviet Republic at Tbilisi. We receive its comments by way of The Current Digest of the Soviet Press, which is published by the Joint Committee on Soviet Studies, appointed by the American Council of Learned Societies.

Zarya Vostoka has been concerned by the activities of unruly students at J. V. Stalin State University in Tbilisi, some of whom appear to have taken rather harshly the Moscow government's current drive to undo Stalin. Furthermore, some of these students (630 of whom are Communists, and 4469 Young Communists) exhibit a universal characteristic—they like to cut classes. In the words of Zarya Vostoka:

It is frequently said at gatherings and meetings that students display a lack of discipline and often do not attend lectures. I. Gverdtsiteli, proctor for studies, will even cite exact figures for you: from Sept. 1 through Dec. 31, 94,033 "man-hours" were missed for unimportant reasons, including 2682 man-hours in Marxism-Leninism, 2231 man-hours in dialectical materialism and 1665 man-hours in political economy.

We commend those statistics to the earnest attention of Bulganin and Khrushchev. Surely there is a pregnant significance in the fact that at Tbilisi State University the lectures in Marxism-Leninism are skipped 61 per cent more than the lectures in plain old political economy. We leave it to B. & K. to figure out whether this is a cause or a result of the current political changes in the U.S.S.R.

Our Duty Toward the Parolee

Between Book Ends

The Mirror of Public Opinion

He is only tolerated, finds it hard to get any job, harder to get a defense job; blanket bonding practices work against him; his family suffers with him; many hide their records from employers; citizens' boards to advise on problems would help.

Isaac Gurman, Executive Secretary, St. Louis Bureau for Men, in Focus, Magazine of the Probation and Parole Association

There is no organized antagonism in this country against the concept of parole. Rationally the community accepts the end product of parole—the parolee. Emotionally this acceptance is watered down considerably and becomes, instead of acceptance, tolerance.

I called some acquaintances of mine who are in the personnel field and employed by large concerns. The consistency of their reporting is of such a nature as to indicate almost a positive law that men with felony convictions are not employed. The law becomes an absolute one when the concern involved is doing defense work.

Oddly enough, those plants which make a fetish of not employing parolees have many ex-convicts on their payrolls. These men merely forget to mention on their employment application that they have been convicted of a felony.

I have been told by some parole officers that they no longer require a parolee to be honest with his employer regarding his criminal history because they feel a man has a right to live in order to live. This is not a good situation, but it exists because it has been forced.

I have asked some of the men in personnel work why parolees were excluded from plants on work not concerned with defense. One would imagine that the ruling was put into effect after considerable thought, but one would look in vain for any philosophy or any working hypothesis as to why parolees were barred. Some bird-brain along the line assumed that this is the proper thing to do and it put into effect without going through the mind of anyone in authority.

One of the causes, perhaps, for the non-employment of parolees in industry has been the trend toward blanket bonding of employees because of the low cost of this type of bonding. This type of insurance policy states that the employer must report any employee who has a criminal record when that fact becomes known, and failure to do so voids insurance protection.

Several years ago I tried to interest insurance companies in a study of blanket bonding, especially in the banking business, but did not succeed. I have recently been informed that the Hacker Foundation is to make such a study.

Several years ago it was brought to my attention that our state probation and parole department was using a certain firm quite extensively for job placement of parolees. Offhand it seemed that here was an employer socially minded and willing to do his part in the total correctional process.

When President Eisenhower came into office strong representations were made to him to keep Mr. Bowles in India. What Mr. Eisenhower did not wish to do, or did not feel able to do, at the time of party changeover, he would be able to do after nearly four years in the presidency. Indeed, it might be a political master stroke, comparable to President Roosevelt's conferring of Cabinet posts, in the election year of 1940, on Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson.

But whether it is good politics or bad politics in the narrow sense, it would be magnificent politics in the broader sense—in the conduct and strategy of the cold war. Just when Russia is making a massive and dangerously effective effort to win trade and trust from the neutralist peoples who will tip the ultimate power balance in Asia, our efforts to compete could find no more dramatic first focus than a reassignment of Mr. Bowles to that area.

by employing these men in legitimate work. A closer analysis of the employment practices of this company, however, revealed that these men were employed at substandard wages, and that if four men were needed six to eight men would be employed, and none of them worked full time. As a result, a peculiar type of exploitation existed which permitted these men to earn just enough money to live but no surplus to carry them over should they wish to secure other employment.

I do not know how extensive this type of exploitation is, but I do believe we have the obligation to look into the motives of employers and to examine their employment practices most carefully. Naturally a high percentage of men working for this company did not complete their parole period satisfactorily in comparison with those placed in better jobs.

One of the conditions necessary to satisfy parole requirements is that the man must have a job. Anyone in the field knows how difficult it is to place a man in a satisfactory job right upon release. The result of this ruling has been that many of our men are released to quasi-jobs, their only purpose being to satisfy parole requirements.

It does seem to me that the job requirement, while a good one, should be based on the individual needs of the man and that where his maintenance is assured he should be granted parole with the privilege of looking for satisfactory employment.

What seems to be needed is a detailed study of these economic sanctions so that they may be alleviated. In most urban communities probation and parole caseloads exceed the caseloads of the voluntary family and children's agencies. Have you ever tried to interest these agencies in the offender? Try it. It will give you patience.

How many planning councils have departments whose concern is the offender? How many schools of social work have courses dealing with probation and parole?

A man who has "served time" serves that time for the rest of his life and his family suffers with him.

If every parole district throughout a state had an advisory committee of citizens with whom parole officers could discuss the problems of parolees, discrimination would recede. I am certain, to an extent worth the effort.

Our communities are warm hearted. The very fact that parole exists humanizes every citizen. It is our job to tell the story of people who have hurt and who have been hurt.

Our Northern Star

Here is a keen look at Alaska by a delightful observer and delightful reporter. Elizabeth Parks Bright of St. Louis, visited that far-flung land with her engineer husband, then added to her on-the-spot information with extensive research. Hers was a large order for she undertakes the story of the discovery, exploration, settlement, geography, people and towns, wildlife, industry and future of Alaska. The result, between book covers as blue as glacier ice, is probably more comprehensive than anything that has been compiled recently on the subject of "America's Frozen Asset."

The current hot issue of Alaska's possible statehood lends immediacy to this account and the author gives succinct reasons why we should no longer delay in adding this north star to our nation's flag. The untouched resources of oils, minerals and metals in this vast deep-freeze, the pleasures and vacationers armed with rod and reel, gun or camera, the opportunities for home-staying in the virgin territory of our last frontier, the fabulous beauty of scenery unsurpassed anywhere in the world—all are clinching argument forth. Her however is that if we do not embrace Alaska soon and guard her well she could prove easy prey for our neighbor Russia across the perilously narrow Bering Strait.

Starting with a vivid recount of early history in fact and fable this volume could serve as a guide to actual travel as well as armchair adventures. It tells where to hunt and fish, where to see totem poles, icebergs, Indians and Eskimos. There is a description of the principal towns, Anchorage, Fairbanks, Sitka, Nome, Juneau and all the others, and what each has to offer. Particularly attractive seems the inland passage where one's ship, never out of sight of land, winds through hundreds of islands and one may observe the teeming wildlife of shore and sea from a deck chair. End papers of the book give a map.

Mrs. Bright is prominent in many local civic and social groups and is the immediate past president of the St. Louis Branch of American Pen Women.

JANIE LOWE PASCHALL

A Dynamic Group THE JEWS IN SOUTH AFRICA, edited by Gustav Saron and Louis Helt. (Oxford, $5.50.)

In the multiracial society of South Africa the Jewish community comprises a small but dynamic segment. Minding their own business and keeping out of politics for the most part, South Africa's Jews have played a leading role in the spectacular industrialization of the country. The note of pride which creeps into this history is thus fully merited. The editors have assembled a notable group of contributors, who deal with every significant aspect of Jewish life in South Africa.

As Mr. Saron points out in his introduction to the volume, the South African Jewish community is now largely South African born and South African in outlook. From time to time its industriousness and prosperity have brought it under critical scrutiny by the dominant Afrikaner group, leading to progressive restrictions on immigration. During World War II anti-Semitism by Afrikaner Nationalists became naked and unashamed, though in recent years this has greatly abated.

Mr. Saron wisely tones down this unhappy phase in his account, but its memory doubtless lingers. Like other white groups in South Africa, the Jewish community's outlook is uncertain and dependent on the long-term settlement of larger race issues. A sober, comprehensive and authoritative survey, which does justice to its theme and credit to its contributors.

Mr. Bowles for Mr. Cooper?

From the Dayton Daily News

If reports are true that Republican leaders are planning to draft former Senator John Sherman Cooper to run for the Senate seat made vacant by the death of Senator Alben W. Barkley, an enormously challenging opportunity could confront President Eisenhower.

If Mr. Cooper consents to make the race, he would have to resign his ambassadorship to India. He has been doing good work out there and whether he could serve his country more ably in New Delhi or in Washington would be a matter for his personal judgment. Assuming that party loyalty and private conscience should unite to lead Mr. Cooper into the senatorial race, Mr. Eisenhower then could take a step that would involve political unorthodoxy but could pay rich dividends to the nation. He could name Chester Bowles Ambassador to India.

Mr. Bowles' service in India under the Truman Administration was extraordinary. He won the confidence of Prime Minister Nehru. His simple ways and genuine interest in all things human won for him the affection of millions of ordinary people.

When President Eisenhower came into office strong representations were made to him to keep Mr. Bowles in India. What Mr. Eisenhower did not wish to do, or did not feel able to do, at the time of party changeover, he would be able to do after nearly four years in the presidency. Indeed, it might be a political master stroke, comparable to President Roosevelt's conferring of Cabinet posts, in the election year of 1940, on Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson.

But whether it is good politics or bad politics in the narrow sense, it would be magnificent politics in the broader sense—in the conduct and strategy of the cold war. Just when Russia is making a massive and dangerously effective effort to win trade and trust from the neutralist peoples who will tip the ultimate power balance in Asia, our efforts to compete could find no more dramatic first focus than a reassignment of Mr. Bowles to that area.

WALTER LIPPMANN

Dr. Sukarno's Warning to the West

WASHINGTON. DR. SUKARNO, THE PRESIDENT of the Indonesian Republic, who was in Washington last week, came at a time when the Administration, and even some members of Congress, are reappraising American policy in Asia.

We know that we have been working up a blind alley. In fact the invitation to Dr. Sukarno was meant to mark a new approach to the neutralism of the newly independent nation. Yet it must be said that to listen to what Dr. Sukarno said to Congress, and to what was implied in what he said, was a sobering experience. For though he had come as head of the Indonesian Republic, he spoke with a great zeal and fervor as an apostle of the revolution which is rising against Western power and influence all the way across Asia and Africa.

Sukarno.

Since the Korean War.

We are, it was quite evident as he spoke, only in the first phase of the reappraisal which the tides of history are compelling us to make.

More specifically, what is going on in Washington today is an effort to correct errors in our policy which are quite recent, which were the consequence of the Korean war.

Before 1950, we did not take the view that all nations ought to join a military coalition of which we are the leaders, that neutralism or not joining our alliances was morally wrong and unfriendly to American vital interests, that with grudging exceptions joining our military alliances was the passport to economic aid.

Unprecedented Revolution.

In the Marshall plan, which was launched before the Korean war, economic aid was given ahead of military aid. The NATO military alliance had not been conceived when the Marshall plan went into effect. It was the Korean war that compelled us to rearm ourselves in Western Europe and led to the militarization of our foreign policy in Asia.

We are now engaged in trying to persuade Congress to agree to some demilitarization of our policy.

Dr. Sukarno made it quite plain how necessary is the demilitarization of our relations with newly independent countries like Indonesia. But there was a lot more to his address than that, and all of it dispelled any notion that with a few changes of emphasis in our foreign policy, all will be well.

In the welcoming addresses and in his responses much was said about George Washington and Thomas Jefferson. But the analogy cannot be carried very far. For the revolution of which Dr. Sukarno is so brilliant a leader and spokesman has a depth and scope and energy which are without precedent.

Across Africa and Asia.

The revolution is not only anti-colonial in the sense that it is a rebellion against foreign rulers. Dr. Sukarno went beyond that to raise the question not only of the independence of the individual nations, but of the movement means to stop short of the expulsion of all Western power and influence from Africa, South Asia and the South Pacific.

What gives this revolution its fierce and enormous energy is the determination at long last to undo the human consequences of three centuries of the white man's domination, and of the former colonial lands.

Dr. Sukarno made it plain that if this four-dimensional revolution can be carried out by democratic means he would prefer it, but that the revolution will have to be carried out, if necessary by totalitarian means. The revolution which Dr. Sukarno was proclaiming is running from Morocco to Tunis to Aden, to Ceylon, to Singapore, to Indonesia, probably to Formosa and Japan.

Can India Still Help?

The Western nations, among whom we belong, are on the defensive throughout his vast area, and all the key positions remaining to them are under attack. One has the feeling that the Western nations are fighting rear guard actions, the French in North Africa, the British in the Middle East, in Formosa and beyond.

We must begin to ask ourselves questions to which we cannot expect to find quick and certain answers. A new relationship between the emancipated East and the democratic West will have to be found. Where shall we look for the end of the thread by which we can find our way through the labyrinth?

In 1950 the answer to that question was plain: that is today. We should have looked to India to be the mediator. Is it now too late for this? Is the damage done by our crudely militarized policies irreparable in the sense that opportunities which once existed are now foreclosed?

Let us hope that nothing is irreparable.

ARTS GROUPS LIST

AWARDS OF $26,000

Presented for Drama, Literature, Music, Painting, Sculpture and Architecture.

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Annual awards totaling $26,000 for distinguished work in literature, music, painting, sculpture and architecture were announced today by the American Academy of Arts and Letters and the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

The Academy's Award of Merit medal and prize of $1000 for the drama went to Enid Bagnold, author of the recent Broadway comedy "The Chalk Garden." Miss Bagnold is an English writer.

Poet John Ciardi received the Academy's fellowship in literature of the American Academy in Rome. Novelist Ralph Ellison won a renewal of last year's fellowship. Their cash value was not disclosed.

The Institute awarded gold medals to composer Aaron Copland for music and to Ivan Mestrovic for sculpture.

The Institute's $1000 Arnold W. Brunner memorial prize in architecture went to John Yeon, of Portland, Ore. The $1000 Russell Loines award for poetry was won by an English poet, John Betjeman.

Seventeen other grants of $1000 each were awarded by the Institute in art, literature and music.

SISTER EDMOND FERN DIES; WEBSTER COLLEGE TEACHER

The funeral of Sister Edmond Fern, S.L., an instructor at Webster College for 20 years, was held today at the Sisters of Loretto motherhouse, Loretto, Ky., where she had lived since retirement last fall.

Sister Fern, who was 82 years old, died Monday after complaining of feeling ill as she was making her annual spiritual retreat. She was a teacher for 63 years, coming to Webster College after serving as president of Loretto Heights College, Denver. She taught Latin and Greek at Webster.

Survivors are a sister, Sister Mary Brigid, S.L., of Loretto, and a great nephew, Maurice Quinn of Kirkwood.

HEADS NATIONAL TB GROUP

NEW YORK, May 23—Miss Ellen Boyce, executive secretary of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, yesterday was elected president of the unaffiliated National Conference of Tuberculosis Workers.

Miss Boyce was elected at a meeting held in conjunction with the annual convention of the National Tuberculosis Association here. She lives at 10 Taylor avenue, St. Louis.

FLIGHT TO SUBURBS
THEORY DISPUTED

In New York It's 'Fiction,' Says Social Worker; East Side Still Expanding.

Popular concept of a flight to the suburbs from crowded New York areas was described as "fiction" today by Simon Slavin, executive director of the Educational Alliance of New York, in an address before the National Conference of Social Work at Kiel Auditorium.

Slavin, whose territory is the lower East Side, pointed out that persons coming into that sector were far more numerous than those leaving and predicted that the population would continue to expand. There is, he added, "an increasingly frightening picture of juvenile delinquency" with teenage destructiveness betraying urban tendencies.

Turning to other sociological aspects, Slavin observed that "more men than women commit suicide but more women than men attempt it."

Two speakers last night attacked public apathy as an underlying cause of "white supremacy" and said immigration policies are harming the United States all over the world. They were Edward J. Ennis, of New York, American Immigration Conference Board chairman, and Elliott Newcomb, New York, executive director of the National Committee on Immigration and Citizenship. They spoke at Hotel De Soto.

Both speakers attributed Congress' lack of interest in correcting injustices to peoples of other nations to a lack of concern by the American people in general. Legislators queried by the speakers were quoted as saying they found no support among their constituents for changes in the act.

Mounting criticisms of the act among those familiar with it concern the questions it raises as to first-class and second-class citizenship, or racial and religious discrimination, the speakers said.

Answering the contention the act bars foreign agents' infiltration, Ennis said, "Keeping out spies is purely an investigative technique; you can't do it by writing a law about it." Ennis served the Justice Department as alien enemy control director in World War II.

Newcomb, tracing immigrants' contributions that have helped form the character of the United States, declared:

"There is no issue with more far-reaching effects than the policies inherent in our immigration laws."

At today's general session in Kiel Auditorium Opera House, social workers were told they have an obligation to support the desegregation movement by integrating their own agencies.

Mrs. Savilla Mills Simons, general secretary of the Y.W.C.A. of the United States, declared that social work is master of skills and insights that can help in the process of change and thus benefit the larger community.

Integration has made progress in private social work agencies in the last five years, she said, reporting that Negroes have been added to agency boards and committees, and there are growing opportunities for employment of Negro staff members.

St. Louis, which has proved an outstanding example of successful school desegregation, has made notable progress in the last few years in social welfare, Mrs. Simons stated. She cited the Social Planning Council's policy which makes a practice of non-discrimination one of the criteria for acceptance of agencies in the council.

CODE OF HONOR ADOPTED FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

A code of honor for St. Louis public high school students was adopted today at a meeting of the presidents of high school student councils at Soldan High School.

The code declares the students will respect all persons regardless of race, religion or national origin, follow the rules and regulations of their schools and the laws of the community, respect public and private property and observe good sportsmanship.

The meeting, approved by school officials and the Board of Education, was suggested by Coleman Kraus, president of the Soldan student council. Student council presidents from nine other public high schools attended the meeting.

AWARD TO TEXAS CONDUCTOR

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Victor Alessandro, conductor of the San Antonio (Tex.) Symphony Orchestra, will receive the 1956 Ditson award for "distinguished service to American music."

The announcement was made yesterday by Dr. Grayson Kirk, president of Columbia University, which has presented the award annually since 1945. It carries a $1000 stipend.

An outstanding example of successful school desegregation, has made notable progress in the last few years in social welfare, Mrs. Simons stated. She cited the Social Planning Council's policy which makes a practice of non-discrimination one of the criteria for acceptance of agencies in the council.

JOHN BURROUGHS STUDENT
AWARDED YALE SCHOLARSHIP

William Howard Corrington, a senior at John Burroughs School, has received a $1300 freshman scholarship to Yale University, it was announced today.

A scholarship student at the high school for the last three years, he will enroll in the university's School of Architecture and Engineering in September.

Corrington, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Corrington, 1080 Wilson avenue, University City, was active in track, football and soccer at Burroughs. He also was a member of the Glee Club and had a leading role in the school's recent play.

For his high academic standing, Corrington was awarded a Clement Wilkin Pollock memorial scholarship as an outstanding senior boy.

CHARLES NAGEL TO ADDRESS
COMMUNITY CONFERENCE

Charles Nagel, director of the City Art Museum, will discuss "Some Obligations and Opportunities of Town Living" at the annual meeting of the West End Community Conference, to be held tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church.

Twelve new directors will be elected, and the program for improvement of the area bounded by Delmar, Union and Page boulevards and Hodiamont avenue will be reviewed.

FUNERAL SERVICES FRIDAY
FOR WILLIAM DEPELHEUER

Funeral services for William F. Depelheuer, former Republican member of the State Senate and House of Representatives and painting contractor for 45 years, will be at 2 p.m. Friday at Moydell undertaking establishment, 1226 Allen avenue. Burial will be in Sunset Burial Park.

Mr. Depelheuer, 84 years old, died after suffering a stroke yesterday at his home, 3212 Winona avenue. He was a Senator from the old Thirtieth district from 1918 to 1934, and earlier had served two terms in the Missouri House.

He operated his painting business until he was employed as a foreman in the city Traffic Division, where he worked 12 years before retiring in 1954. Surviving are two daughters, Miss Hilda and Miss Marie Depelheuer, both of the Winona avenue address.

Study of Communism's Inroads
On Catholicism Behind 'Curtains'

First Copy of 'Red Book' Presented to Pope Pius—Reverses Called Worst Since Pagan Rome.

By BARRETT MCGURN
The New York Herald Tribune-People's Express Special Staff

ROME, May 23 — The first copy of a Catholic "red book" on Communism, describing the attack on the faith of 75,000,000 Roman Catholics in the Soviet area, Yugoslavia and Communist China as the worst since pagan Rome, was presented to Pope Pius XII yesterday.

The 374-page volume, prepared by the International Catholic Action organization, was the most detailed study of Catholicism behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains so far attempted.

The study said that although churches are open throughout much of the Communist area, Communists are still trying to wipe out Christianity and have inflicted deep wounds.

The book made these statements on conditions in various countries:

The Soviet Union—Catholic hierarchy was liquidated long before World War II. Lower-ranking clergy were hit at the same time. In the diocese of Zytomir, for example, only one out of 66 priests was left by 1931.

Soviet-Annexed Areas—Although Lithuania was 80 per cent Catholic, religion is now a "dangerous private affair," with only one out of six bishops still active as of a year ago. In the Carpathian Ukraine, the Greek Orthodox Church is being used as "an instrument of Communist conquest" against the Roman Catholic Church but, according to the information of the International Catholic Action, "results are very scant."

Poland—On the surface, Catholicism and Communism are co-existing despite the reduction of the hierarchy from 33 to 23 and of the priesthood from 11,730 to 8,639. But the truth is that Communism is at work insidiously attempting to empty Catholicism of its "real content" and trying to spread a "Christian Marxist" amalgamation, which is a contradiction in terms.

Hungary—Although Catholicism is the majority religion, the Catholic church has been deprived of its liberty and is subject now to Communist state control. Bishops not only cannot govern their dioceses and cannot preach, but do not even have personal liberty.

Czechoslovakia—Three-quarters of the country was Catholic but the faithful are now separated from their bishops. New priests loyal to the Communist regime are being trained; 1368 Catholic institutions have been suppressed.

China—Most of the clergy, which numbered 5637 in 1949, have been reduced to "the most extreme penury," hundreds of schools have been confiscated and all Catholic institutions directed by foreigners have been destroyed. Exact figures are hard to get, but it is "probable" that not fewer than 70 priests and 3000 laymen, all of them Chinese, have been arrested.

Yugoslavia—Although Marshal Josip (Tito) Broz has broken with Moscow, the Yugoslav regime is working to "de-Christianize" the people and has succeeded in separating the young from their parents. Some "technical" concessions to religion are made but atheism is required for all state employees and soldiers and education is a Communist party monopoly.

EDWIN P. IRWIN APPOINTED TO Y.M.C.A. REGIONAL POST

Edwin P. Irwin, assistant general secretary of the Metropolitan Y.M.C.A., has been appointed associate secretary of the West Central Area of the "Y," it was announced today. He will leave St. Louis June 13 and assume his duties at Topeka, Kan., a month later.

Irwin, who joined the association's staff here as educational director of Downtown branch in 1945, organized and directed the informal adult education program there. He was associate executive, and in 1950 became assistant general secretary.

A member of the St. Louis Advertising Club, he has served on several national committees of the Y.M.C.A. Irwin, 879 Providence avenue, Webster Groves, and his wife, have a daughter who is a sophomore at Washington University. The West Central Area of the Y.M.C.A. comprises Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming.

Coast Keeps Hands in Teams' Pockets

8 Schools Fined for Violations

VICTORIA, B.C., May 23 (AP)—The Pacific Coast Conference fathers who yesterday spanked all but one member school, two of them for the second time, closed up the woodshed today and turned to the nicer things of the sporting world.

The punishment dealt eight of the nine P.C.C. members yesterday constituted a light tap on the wallet for stumbling over rules, with the entire tab totaling only $4,900.

The finer things in today's "loose ends" agenda included items like "wrestling and water polo" and what should be done about football scouting, etc.

Burning Question. The fines imposed in the final woodshed session came as the conference answered to the burning question of "Who's next?"

Washington had been deprived of an estimated $52,000 in Rose Bowl receipts and placed on probation for two years early in May. Last week, the conference handed U.C.L.A. a three-year probation, fined it $15,000 outright and took away some $78,000 in Rose Bowl receipts for the three years to come.

Both schools were found guilty of paying athletes in violation of the conference athletic code. The latest list of fines included nothing so outrageous. California was nicked $1,550 for "improper issue of complimentary tickets, irregularities in the campus labor program for athletes and for permitting an off-campus interview with an athlete."

Washington State College was the only school given a clean bill of health. Washington and U.C.L.A. were hit again, the former for $250 and Stanford for $350.

"Only a Decimal Point." "This," quipped Dr. Joseph Kaplan, official conference representative for U.C.L.A., "is only a decimal point."

Little Idaho, which gets only a partial share of Rose Bowl receipts and plays a curtailed conference football schedule, ranked second to California with a fine of $1,000 for "irregularities in the campus labor program."

Oregon State was hit for $650, Southern California for $500, Oregon $350 and Stanford $250.

Colorado Grid Coach Seeks $20,000 for Scholarships

DENVER, May 23 (AP)—Football Coach Dal Ward has appealed to Colorado University supporters for $20,000 annually to provide an additional 20 athletic scholarships.

"We need your help if we are to compete with other schools in the Big Seven," Ward told a group of 50 he invited to a dinner meeting last night. Harry Carlson, dean of men and athletic director, said the drive for funds was within the rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (N.C.A.A.) and the Big Seven Conference.

"It has the approval of the University and my office," Carlson said.

The university now provides 80 scholarships for football players.

Ward said morale on the team has been harmed because of "differences in scholarships on our squad. . . I may have to cut down the squad, but every football player will get the same aid within the boundary of conference and N.C.A.A. rules."

He told the group the university needs better football players and that it takes money to bring them to the Boulder campus.

Ward also said he intended to "improve coaching. I've backed up and taken another look at our football situation last year, and I've changed my attitude. We're going to change our methods."

Braves Send Nichols To Wichita to Make Room for Gene Conley

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 23 (UP)—Southpaw Pitcher Chet Nichols, a rookie whiz in 1951, was waived out of the major leagues yesterday and assigned outright to Wichita of the American Association by the Milwaukee Braves.

Braves General Manager John Quinn said, "Nichols just hasn't performed like he did before he went into the service. He hasn't been able to do the job for us."

Milwaukee made the move to provide a spot for lanky right-handed Pitcher Gene Conley, who will come off the disabled list Friday when the team opens a three-game home stand here.

Jacobs Named Coach. LONDON, Ontario, May 23 (AP)—Indian Jack Jacobs, former quarterback with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, has agreed to act as head coach and quarterback with the London Football Club in the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union, club officials said.

Golliday Withdrawn From Big Ten Meet

EVANSTON, Ill., May 23 (AP)—Jim Golliday, co-holder of the world's 100-yard dash record of .09.3, was withdrawn from the Big Ten outdoor track meet this weekend at Minnesota by Northwestern Coach Rut Walter.

Walter said Golliday still was not ready for competition after suffering a pulled thigh muscle at the Big Ten indoor meet in March.

Golliday's first test since the injury is expected to come in a Chicago track club meet June 2 and the Central Collegiate at Milwaukee June 9.

SUIT TO CLOSE PINE CREST NURSING HOME DISMISSED

A suit for an injunction to close Pine Crest Nursing Home Division 1, at Ballwin, filed in St. Louis county circuit court in December 1954, was dismissed yesterday at Clayton.

Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz said the nursing home, one of three operated by Mrs. Alice B. Burgess and her mother, Mrs. Ella Bopp McDonald, had been brought up to licensing standards through recommended improvements.

Counts in the suit relating to two other homes operated in the county by Mrs. Burgess and Mrs. McDonald were dropped last August, after the establishments were brought up to licensing standards.

Heads Women Peace Officers. SAN DIEGO, Calif., May 23 (AP)—Dr. Lois Lundell Higgins, director of the Illinois Crime Prevention Bureau, was elected the first president of the National Association of Women Peace Officers, organized here yesterday.

DIDN'T HEAR AID'S DIG AT KEFAUVER, STEVENSON SAYS

Illinoisan Won't Take Bame for Floridian's Remark on Senator's Racial Views.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 23 (AP)—Adlai Stevenson disclaimed any responsibility yesterday for criticism by one of his supporters of the racial stand of Senator Estes Kefauver, his rival for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Former Gov. Millard Caldwell of Florida, in introducing Stevenson to an audience at Tallahassee, quoted a single paragraph from a newspaper editorial which referred to Kefauver as an "integrationist" and a "sympathizer seeking Negro votes."

Stevenson told newsmen later that he did not hear Caldwell quote from the editorial. He said he was seated behind Caldwell and could not make out what he said.

Caldwell, a delegate candidate pledged to the former Illinois governor in Tuesday's presidential preference primary, quoted the Richmond (Va.) News-Leader when he introduced Stevenson to state employees at the capitol.

"I am not responsible for what Gov. Caldwell said about Senator Kefauver. I certainly am not responsible for what the Richmond newspaper wrote about him," Stevenson said.

Considered Good Governor. "Probably I do not agree with all my (Florida) delegates on all questions including desegregation. But I want to make it clear that I consider Millard Caldwell was a good governor of Florida."

Caldwell's only reference to Kefauver's position on segregation, a hot issue in north Florida, was the quotation from the newspaper editorial which appeared March 24.

Kefauver in campaign speeches in Florida has termed desegregation the law of the land and said the problems created by mixing the races in public schools must be settled at the local level on the basis of local conditions.

Caldwell urged Florida Democrats to give Stevenson their 28 nominating votes because, he said, he is the only candidate "who can carry the South, and without the South the Democrats can't win."

Caldwell said he didn't "see any profit in choosing a man who cannot be nominated and who cannot be elected."

Warns Against Violence. Later at Lake City, the center of a strongly pro-segregation are Stevenson repeated his own position that desegregation is now the law, but he said it cannot be accomplished overnight and that the problem must be approached "with patience and good will, and without violence or force."

Stevenson assailed Republican farm policy. He charged the Administration with responsibility for a 27 per cent decline in farm prices in the past three years.

"When stock market prices are at an all-time high and farm prices are at an all-time low, you can be sure the Republicans are in office," he said.

He said he favored 90 per cent parity payments for farmers to help solve the problem of declining farm income. He added that the prime need of the farmer is a "sympathetic administration, particularly to the farm family."

Stevenson came here today for a day-long handshaking tour of shopping centers, factories and beach communities.

KEFAUVER SEEKS SUPPORT OF AGED

The New York Times News Service, Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., May 23—Senator Estes Kefauver campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination, bid for the support of needy elderly citizens last night.

The Tennesseean said that if elected to the Presidency, he would propose "material revision of the social security laws so that the insecurity now imposed would be replaced by the kind of security that will keep pace with the contemporary needs of our inflationary economy."

Two weeks ago the Senator's supporters in California claimed a local political coup when their candidate won the endorsement of the California Institute of Social Welfare, a powerful 65,000-member organization of elderly citizens.

Many Elderly Persons.

Kefauver is vying with Adlai E. Stevenson for Florida's 28 ballots and California's 68 votes in the national convention in August. Florida's presidential preference primary will be held on May 29 and California's on June 5.

Both states in recent years have attracted large numbers of retired persons with limited incomes and low earning power. In their stretch drives the two contenders have been stressing their views on social security and old-age assistance programs.

LOUIS ARMSTRONG LANDS IN AFRICA AS 10,000 CHEER

ACCRA, Gold Coast, May 23 (AP)—Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong was welcomed in this West African capital today with the sort of demonstration usually reserved for heads of state.

Ten thousand people roared a greeting at the sun-baked airfield and Satchmo—king of jazz trumpet—acknowledged the tribute with a regal wave and a brilliant smile.

The crowd was dotted with the multi-colored umbrellas of native chiefs, many of whom had traveled 400 miles from the northern territories to hear Armstrong.

Fifteen dance bands blasted out an especially composed musical tribute.

As Satchmo, in a tuxedo, appeared in the plane door, Minister of the Interior Akko Adjei, accompanied by the secretary of the cabinet, stepped forward. There were handshakes and smiles, bows and back slaps.

Armstrong and his wife stood in an open car as they whisked through five miles of crowded streets into town.

Satchmo then paid a courtesy call on Premier Kwame Nkrumah and later lunched with him.

RUSSIA TO BUY $2,100,000 WORTH OF BRITISH HERRING

LONDON, May 23 (UPI)—When Soviet leaders Nikita Khrushchev and Nikolai Bulganin were visiting Britain last month, Khrushchev complained that although Russia wants to buy more important goods, "all you want to sell us is herring."

The first major Anglo-Soviet deal since the visit was announced today—for $2,100,000 worth of British herring.

MAN ARRESTED AS SENDER OF CARD CONTAINING HEROIN

Dempsey Lee Owens, whose alias "Dexter Gordon" was signed to a greeting card containing three capsules of heroin mailed to a City Jail prisoner, was arrested yesterday by police of the narcotics squad.

Owens, a Negro, admitted having used such an alias but denied sending the card to Miss Gladys Stamps who is being held at the jail pending transfer to a federal penitentiary for narcotics violations. However, narcotics agents said 38 heroin capsules were found in Owens's apartment in the 5000 block of Cabanne avenue.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Wed., May 23, 1956 9 C

Federal narcotics agents described Owens as a principal supplier of narcotics to prisoners at the Workhouse where he has been a prisoner.

STEVENSON, KEFAUVER CAN'T FIND AUDIENCE

believe Stevenson has an edge in part because he has more organization support. They qualify this by saying that many northerners who have migrated here are at heart Republicans, although they have registered as Democrats to participate in the Democratic primaries. They might deliberately vote against Stevenson to kill him off as the principal contender.

The guess is that the total vote will be only about 450,000 which is roughly half the number who voted in the election for Governor. The total Democratic registration is 1,275,000, Republican 62,000. In the presidential election four years ago Mr. Eisenhower got roughly 55 per cent of the vote and Stevenson 45 per cent. Those who know Florida politics from a relatively objective viewpoint believe the state will go for Mr. Eisenhower again against any Democratic candidate now visible and by about the same ratio.

Issues Bore Public.

Perhaps one reason Stevenson and Kefauver find it so hard to make themselves heard is because they have so little to say that seems relevant to the swiftly changing scene typified here at home by Florida's fantastic growth or at the vast and overpowering forces unleashed in nuclear fission and fusion. As in their debate, so widely billed and on the whole so disappointing, they both expressed right and good thoughts that have a liberal sound.

But these thoughts about colonialism and anti-colonialism, about monopoly and small business, do not seem to get beneath the surface of the lives of people busy and distracted by the thousand and one distractions of the modern world. This could change and quickly if the current prosperity were to be shaved off a little more as it seems to be with the automobile layoffs in the north. But as of today these two earnest men, candidates for the highest office in the land, are going into the remotest highways and byways looking for someone to listen for even just a few minutes.

AIR FORCE CALLS CARRIERS POOR FOR BOMBING RUSSIA

from which launched, carrier aircraft of 1500 nautical mile radius require that the carrier force approach within 100-300 miles of the Eurasian land mass to hit a significant number of either primary or secondary Soviet targets.

"In approaching this close, the carrier force would be subject to intensive land-based air attack, submarine attack and/or heavily mined sea areas for the last 1000 or 1500 miles prior to launching its own offensive air strike—or during a period of one to three days at top carrier force speed. The carrier force would also have to remain in hostile water, until its own aircraft were recovered and withdrawn under intensive enemy attack. The alternative to this delayed withdrawal would be to abandon its aircraft or, in a few instances, it might be possible for them to land in neutral or friendly territory.

Airplane's Versatility.

"4—One of the outstanding characteristics of the airplane is its ability to operate against other weapons in the air, on the land, on the sea and beneath its surface. Aircraft carriers are not required for the exploitation of this characteristic."

Under "detection" the Air Force analyzed this statement by Thomas: "To locate one of these high speed and mobile forces, even in these days of electronic magic, would be very difficult. It would require considerable effort to pinpoint its location, to determine its position, and to establish its objective."

The Air Force answer:

"1—Detection: Direction-finding search. The radar equipment essential for the defense of ships to warn of approaching hostile aircraft, transmits continuous electronic impulses which can be received by electronic listening equipment in the hostile aircraft. The range of this listening equipment is limited only by line-of-sight or approximately 200 miles at 20,000 feet, and 400 miles at 35,000 feet.

"Two B-36 type aircraft, searching for radar electronic impulses transmitted by ship's search radar, could scan the entire North Atlantic from the southern tip of Greenland to the Tropic of Cancer in a 24-hour period—or an area equivalent in size to the continent of South America.

Can Pinpoint Ship.

"From 200 miles away, hostile aircraft with this search equipment could pinpoint the location of a ship with a maximum error of 11 miles. At lesser distances, the ship's location can be pinpointed with even greater accuracy. Once a source of radar transmission is located, electronic surveillance could provide continuous and accurate information on carrier force speed and direction."

Radar search—Definition of radar returns from water surface is such that a dense metal mass on a sea permits ready identification of number and comparative size of ships. In any groups of ships, the largest such as a carrier, would normally provide a radar return that a relatively inexperienced person could readily identify.

"At medium altitudes and above, one 20-second 'sweep' on an airborne search radar scope can accurately survey an area of approximately 15,000 square miles, or an area greater than the combined states of Massachusetts and Connecticut. In three hours, two B-36 type reconnaissance aircraft could radar-scan approximately 1,540,000 square miles—or an area greater than the entire Mediterranean sea.

Comparative Speeds.

"2—Speed: Full-throttle steaming of a carrier for a period of six hours represents approximately 20 minutes flight time for modern jet aircraft. It would take the carrier force approximately five days to cross the North Atlantic and approximately three days to travel the length of the Mediterranean sea, either of which can be completely electronically scanned by two B-36 type aircraft during any 24-hour period."

"3—Concealment: Weather does not interfere with electronic detection. As a matter of fact, bad weather—low ceilings, icing, etc.—provides enemy aircraft and submarines the best opportunity for electronic attack and places the aircraft carrier's air and anti-submarine defenses at great disadvantages."

The Navy has suggested that carriers as movable bases were less vulnerable than land bases and the Air Force takes issue on this statement by Thomas: "These moving sea bases will give our reprisal system the flexibility and dispersal it must have in these times when a sudden attack might overwhelm our fixed land bases."

Experience of World War II.

The Air Force recalled World War II carrier history. There were seven carriers afloat in December 1941—the Lexington, Yorktown, Wasp, Hornet, Ranger, Enterprise and Saratoga. The Air Force said the first four were sunk between the sixth and eleventh months of the war, and the Ranger was never in combat in World War II.

Drawing on the records of 33 carriers of all types, the Air Force said they averaged "approximately 75 per cent of the time out of action and out of the 'combat zone' for damage repair, maintenance and for other reasons, such as equipping, training and resupplying."

It was also claimed that "individual carrier tours in the combat zone were usually of short duration and averaged one and one-half months."

The Air Force notes that the Navy has not indicated how dependent the carriers were on overseas land bases and adds: "It is easy to compute that it would take approximately 30 times the number of offensive strikes by the Russians to knock out our land base system as to destroy our floating air force."

"A carrier task force of 12 ships spread over an area the size of the state of Indiana (36,291 square miles) would mean an average of more than 3000 square miles of sea per ship—an area almost half again larger than the state of Delaware. Such a deployment would present a relatively sparse defense and limit mutual protection. Regardless of deployment, it is reasonable to assume that the enemy would concentrate its attack on the two or three attack carriers in a task force in order to render the force impotent for offensive action."

Use of Guided Missiles.

"In the future, the defense of ships against aircraft may be improved by the use of air-guided missiles. On the other hand, the defense of ships will be vastly complicated and made more difficult by air-to-surface missiles which can be launched by aircraft, beyond the range of ship's detection radar, but which could use the ship's defensive radar as one of many possible means of aiming and homing."

The Air Force recalled that Secretary Thomas himself warned on Oct. 5, 1954, that the emphasis by the Navy would have to be on speed, that while they are hitched to replenishment ships for several hours on fixed course and speed they are "an easy target for the submarine."

Also Thomas' concern for sea mines had been noted in the air staff. In his own words the document tells how 6000 contact and magnetic mines planted by the enemy had delayed the United Nations' amphibious entry into Wonsan in Korea for eight days. Meanwhile South Korean troops captured the city and swept on. The Air Force study continues:

"Indicative of the carrier's vulnerability is the sacrifice of offensive capability that results from the normal allocation of 70 per cent of the available planes for defense of a carrier task force. Representative Robert T. Ashmore (Dem.), South Carolina, in checking this, found that 17 attack carriers would have a total of about 1190 planes for purely defense reasons. This is approximately the same number of aircraft allocated for protection of one-half of the United States."

"During Operation Mainbrace (NATO North Atlantic naval maneuver, six carriers were unable to conduct aircraft operations (defensive or offensive) for a period of more than 24 hours due to rough seas and bad weather."

The Air Force also cited an official Navy statement on "Crossroads," the first test of atomic bombs against a naval fleet to illustrate the havoc caused on ships by an air atomic attack.

The best answer as to carriers' and other ships' dependence on overseas bases, said the Air Force, was the Navy's expenditures on overseas construction and maintenance since World War II. Information on this was not available today. The Air Force added:

"In addition to numerous friendly overseas ports and port facilities used on a routine basis by the Navy, it has developed extensive port facilities of its own in overseas areas such as Japan, the Philippines, North Africa and Europe. The Navy also has more than 32 overseas air bases in various countries and territories of the northern hemisphere. Not included in this total are the 30 overseas air bases and facilities the Navy uses jointly with the Air Force. These overseas naval bases should make the Navy apprehensive if it believes there are serious problems of sovereignty."

In the remote event that all overseas bases are denied to us, the heavy bomber force of the United States Air Force, operating from North America, would be able to conduct continuous attacks against the primary targets of the Soviet Union."

FOOD PRICE INDEX HERE DECLINED 0.2 PCT. IN MONTH

The Department of Labor's index of St. Louis food prices dropped 0.2 per cent from March to April, it was announced today. With 1947-49 prices as 100, the April figure was 110.5, which is 1.8 per cent below the level of April 1955.

In the month of April dairy products dropped 2.7 per cent and "other foods at home" dropped 1 per cent, but those changes were practically offset by increases of 2 per cent for fruits and vegetables, 2 per cent for meats, poultry and fish, and 1 per cent for cereals and bakery products.

Compared with prices a year ago, the meats, poultry and fish group was down 10.2 per cent, and fruits and vegetables, 7 per cent. There were increases of 8 per cent for dairy products, 5 per cent for cereals and bakery products, and 8 per cent for "other foods at home."

ST. LOUIS DEPUTY MARSHAL HURT IN OKLAHOMA CRASH

Special to the Post-Dispatch
CHelsea, Okla., May 23—A deputy United States Marshal, Ferdinand A. Creeley of St. Louis, suffered arm and shoulder injuries when his automobile and a truck collided on U.S. Highway 66 near here yesterday.

The Oklahoma highway patrol said Creeley's car and a truck driven by Kenneth D. Packwood of Exeter, Mo., sideswiped.

Creeley and A. L. Polster, a guard, also of St. Louis, were en route to the El Reno, Okla., federal reformatory to deliver two prisoners. They completed their journey after Creeley was treated by a physician.

TELLS WHY PRESS IS BARRED FROM CIVIL RIGHTS SEMINAR

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The Justice Department said yesterday attendance at police training schools for FBI instruction on the civil rights laws is limited to law enforcement officers to promote free discussion.

Deputy Attorney General William P. Rogers gave this explanation to Representative Moss (Dem., California) of the House Government Information subcommittee in response to an inquiry from Moss as to why newsmen were barred from such sessions.

The Moss subcommittee has been conducting an investigation to determine whether legitimate public information is being suppressed by Government agencies. The chairman recently forwarded to Attorney General Brownell a dispatch from Columbia, S.C., which reported that a "seminar" on civil rights, including constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press, was in progress there, and that the press was barred from the sessions.

WAR EQUIPMENT, WEAPONS DISPLAY OPENS TOMORROW

Modern weapons and equipment of war will be displayed tomorrow, Friday and Saturday at the Northland Shopping Center in St. Louis county as a tribute to America's armed forces.

The display will include weapons ranging from M-1 rifles to tanks mounting 90-mm. rifles and vehicles ranging from jeeps to ponderous equipment used by the Army Corps of Engineers. Naval equipment also will be shown, including a scale model of an Essex-type carrier.

Motion picture films of actual naval, ground and air battles will be shown twice daily at the Famous-Barr Northland store. The showings will be at 10:30 a.m. and 8:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, and 10:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday. Special exhibitions and drills will be given by various units.

IMPROVEMENT PLAN FOR EAST ST. LOUIS

Six-Point Program Formulated for Community-Wide Action.

A long-range, six-point community improvement program was formulated by a steering committee of the Committee to Improve East St. Louis at a meeting last night at the Broadview Hotel.

First of the six objectives, which will be submitted by the steering group to the full committee when the latter is fully organized, is to foster "modern and realistic local laws, codes and ordinances." It was proposed that four special committees tackle the various phases of this goal.

In its second proposal, the committee would formulate a comprehensive general plan for the community as a whole. Ten committees would tackle such problems as annexation procedures, zoning, transportation, public utilities, urban renewal, rehousing of families displaced by slum clearance and other phases of such a plan.

Thirdly, the co-ordination of activities of charitable, social and church groups would be sought, with a recommendation that the Social Planning Council of East St. Louis be asked to draw up a program for carrying out this objective.

Determination of the best method of conserving good neighborhoods and halting the spread of blight in older neighborhoods is the fourth objective while the fifth is the development of means for meeting the financial obligations involved in carrying out the committee's proposed activities.

The sixth goal would be the encouragement and active participation by individuals and representative citizen groups in the effort to improve the city.

Al A. Geiger, head of a printing firm, is chairman of the steering committee. He said one of the early efforts of the group would be to persuade private interests to improve the appearance of the East St. Louis riverfront. He said this was desirable because of the Mid-America Jubilee which the City of St. Louis is holding in September on the west bank of the river in the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial area.

FOREIGN JUDGE, 2 LAWYERS SPECTATORS AT TRIAL HERE

Three foreign visitors to St. Louis, a judge and two members of the legal profession, listened as spectators to a trial in United States District Judge Ruben M. Hulen's court today.

They were Jorge Pinto de la Torre, president of La Paz Bar Association, La Paz, Bolivia; Park Sun-dae, chief prosecutor of the Pusan district court and an outstanding criminal lawyer of Seoul, Korea, and Chief Judge Pyun Ok-chu of the appellate court at Seoul. At noon they attended a Council on World Affairs luncheon, at which Henrik Kauffmann, Denmark ambassador to the United States, spoke.

Park and Judge Pyun are traveling in this country under the sponsorship of the Foreign Leader program of the International Educational Exchange Service of the United States Department of State. Pinto's tour is sponsored by Governmental Affairs Institute, Washington.

UNITARIANS PROPOSE PACT AGAINST TESTING A-WEAPONS

BOSTON, May 23 (AP)—The American Unitarian Association voted last night to urge a "universal pact" against testing atomic and hydrogen bombs.

Delegates to the 131st annual meeting adopted a resolution urging the United States to "continue to take the initiative through the United Nations" to enter such a world-wide pact. The meeting also adopted a resolution which stated: "We favor every attempt to meet and search for areas of agreement and mutual understanding among all races and persuasions and will ourselves foster and join with all such attempts. That resolution urged the President and governors of states to support "conferences of all good citizens of all races in order that a groundwork of healthy communication may be established and just solutions to the problems may be found."

FLORISSANT COUNCIL OK'S PLAN TO SELL WATER SYSTEM

St. Louis County Water Co. was authorized by the Florissant City Council last night to present to the Missouri Public Service Commission its proposal to buy for $550,000 the Florissant water distribution system.

If the commission approves the sale, the matter will be submitted to Florissant voters at a special election, Henry Koch, city clerk, said. He added that the council indicated by its action last night that it favors the sale.

The water properties include 55 miles of mains, 248 fire hydrants and meters in 4894 homes and businesses. Florissant purchases water wholesale from County Water Co. and sells it on a retail basis. Koch said the city has found expansion of the system to meet municipal growth to be increasingly expensive.

STOCK GAINS SWEEP AWAY IN LATE SALES

Close, However, Sees 357
Higher on Day With 531 Lower.

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—An early stock market rally gained staying power and prices again closed lower today. Leading stocks took losses ranging from fractions to 2 points, reversing the picture of mid-day.

The rise took place amid brisk activity in the second hour, then prices gradually weakened as the trading pace slowed. The erosion of prices continued quietly for most of the afternoon until a burst of selling in the last half hour kicked away the props.

Steele, motors, rails and copper led the early advance. The latter retraced after mid-divisions, but a few individual gainers remained.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell $1.00 to $180.10 with the industrials off $2.00, the rails off 10 cents and the utilities unchanged.

Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 397 points lower at 480.16 at the close. Earlier in the day the index showed a gain of 1.12. The 20 rails were 40 of a point lower at 169.07, while the 15 utilities gained .07 at 65.70.

There were 1162 issues traded of which 357 advanced and 531 declined. There were 67 new lows for the year and 10 new highs.

Volume for the day totaled 2,140,000 shares compared with 2,290,000 yesterday.

London stocks were lower today, the Financial Times index dropping 23 points to 184.00.

The United Press said two new items appeared on the deflation list today to send stock prices down after a morning recovery. The list started out firm, its second rally in 13 sessions. Best prices of the day in the industrial picture. Later the price of copper was cut two cents a pound by custom smelters. That focused attention on the copper which quickly fell to net losses from early gains. The declines ranged to nearly 5 in copper range.

I. T. & T. QUARTER INCOME

NUTLEY, N.J., May 23 (AP)—Col. Sosthenes Behn, who founded the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. 36 years ago, today announced his retirement as chairman.

Behn told the I.T. & T. annual meeting he expects to continue on the executive committee and board of directors "and will of course be available to render such service as I can to the board and president."

COMMODITIES

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Wholesale food prices, as measured by the Bureau of Economic Warfare, declined this week from the 1936 record high of $1.15, compared with $1.04 a week ago and $1.05 a month ago.

Associated Press weighed wholesale price index of 35 commodities (1926 index = 100) was 100.25, month ago 100.18, year ago 100.18.

U.S. Economy Today

DIRECTION OF INDUSTRY? SOME VIEWS

By Sam Dawson

IF THE tug of war between economic forces today has you baffled, relax. The experts can't make up their minds which way it's going, either.

Government economists, purchasing agents for industry, analysts for financial houses appear agreed on one thing, however. By summer the direction of the economy is taking shape to be a lot clearer, at least.

The President's top economic adviser, Dr. Arthur Burns, notes "divergent movements" going on beneath the surface of generally good times. He finds a "cost-price squeeze" at work in farming, home building, and the auto and farm equipment industries.

Burns admits the possibility of new inflation "coming," but thinks it isn't clear yet whether the industrial price hikes of late can be passed along to consumers. He believes it more likely that the pressure of rising wages on prices can be held down by increasing the output per unit of labor. An intense retail competition should ward off much of the inflation threat for the consumer.

MORE DIRECTLY CONCERNED with industrial prices, with new orders and with maintaining the most favorable level of inventories are the members of the National Association of Purchasing Agents. They report that the price spiral appears to be slowing up now. But as for business in general they are less optimistic. A poll of the members of the association shows that business activity has leveled off even more this month. And they have to go back to early 1954 to find a time when so many kinds of businesses were reporting falling production and a slump in new orders.

WITH THIS BACKGROUND FOR THEIR ANNUAL MEETING in Cleveland, the purchasing agents appear to accept the finding of the economists addressing them that the chances for another broad upturn in the economy very soon aren't spectacular. They think a number of industries will have to work out their present difficulties first and how long that will take they just don't predict.

THE NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FINANCIAL ANALYSTS societies, meeting in Boston, heard the President's economic adviser warn that the present is a time of testing in the nation's markets and that "developments in prices, inventories and retail trade will bear careful watching in coming weeks and months." The business of an analyst is to watch one or more industries and the economy in general very carefully and then guess which way things are going so that investors can take advantage of it.

At their Boston meeting the majority of them are reported to consider the short term industrial outlook clouded. But one thing that has been bothering them—how high interest rates will climb—looks a little clearer now. The majority are reported to feel that the long climb in the cost of borrowing is about over.

DESPITE THE GREAT DEMAND OF INDUSTRY for funds to finance a record expansion program, there's a chance that other demands for credit may ease during the summer lull that so many now expect.

All these business experts, a little uncertain in their own minds, would like to know what the consumers are going to do, how much they'll be able to buy if they want to. Last year they really splurged. This year they're cutting down on some kinds of spending.

If you could tell the experts what the consumers are going to do next, expediting would be an easier job.

FOOD PRICE INDEX HERE DECLINED 0.2 PCT. IN MONTH

The Department of Labor's index of St. Louis food prices dropped 0.2 per cent from March to April, it was announced today. With 1947-48 prices as 100, the April figure was 110.5, which is 1.8 per cent below the level of April 1955.

In the month of April dairy products dropped 2.7 per cent and "other foods at home" dropped 1 per cent, but those changes were practically offset by increases of 2 per cent for fruits and vegetables, 2 per cent for meats, poultry and fish, and 1 per cent for cereals and bakery products.

Compared with prices a year ago, the meats, poultry and fish group was down 10.2 per cent, and fruits and vegetables, 7 per cent. There were increases of 8 per cent for dairy products, 5 per cent for cereals and bakery products, and 8 per cent for "other foods at home."

CITY PERSONNEL DIRECTOR FIRED $2 ON SPEEDING COUNT

R. Elliott Searce, director of the city's department of personnel, was fined $2 today for speeding 30 miles an hour in a 20-mile-an-hour zone. A plea of guilty was entered for Searce, who did not appear, by Joseph Nosky, assistant director of the Public Defender Bureau, in the court of Provisional Police Judge John D. Flynn.

Searce, 44, West Pine boulevard, was arrested April 21 in South St. near Hickory street, near where two other city officials were ticketed for the same offense the day before. They were Edward G. Brungard, director of public welfare, and William E. Buder, member of the Board of Election Commissioners.

Several motorists have been arrested for speeding in the same area, including a relative of Alderman Raymond Leisner, who sponsored the ordinance reducing the normal speed limit on Fourteenth between Chouteau and Park avenues. The bill was enacted because of numerous accidents in the vicinity of the Clinton-Peabody project.

SOLDIER BELIEVED AMNESIA VICTIM; STRUCK ON HEAD

Special to the Post-Dispatch: INDIANAPOLIS, May 23 (AP)—A soldier at Fort Leonard Wood, waited today for government transportation to his station after arriving here yesterday, apparently a victim of amnesia resulting from a blow on the head believed to have been suffered in St. Louis the same day.

Dammann of Newburgh, N.Y., was picked up as a hitchhiker near East St. Louis yesterday by Glenn Ogle of Flint, Mich., who turned the soldier over to a sheriff's deputies here because "he appeared to be in a daze."

After hospital treatment, Dammann told authorities he could not remember what happened for about 14 hours yesterday after he stepped over a bus station in St. Louis. He said he had been struck with a blunt instrument and his wallet was missing.

EISENHOWER SAYS HE IS WILLING TO CONFER WITH CAIN

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—President Eisenhower said today he is willing to meet with Harry Cain, the Administration's leading critic of its employee security program.

Mr. Eisenhower was asked at his press conference if Cain, who has indicated he expects to lose his post as a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board, can see the President if he seeks an appointment.

Mr. Eisenhower replied with the single word, "Yes." Then he turned to other subjects.

Cain, a former Republican Senator from Washington state, has been among other things, the facts about "injustice" in the federal loyalty-security program are being kept from the President.

Cain implied in a speech in New York May 5 that he had been unsuccessful in conveying his stand to the President.

CARBINES, FIELD COMPASSES ARE STOLEN FROM ARMORY

Fourteen 30-caliber Army carbines and an undetermined number of field compasses were stolen last night in a burglary of the headquarters of the 202nd Anti-aircraft Battalion, Missouri National Guard Armory, at 3600 Goodfellow boulevard.

The loss was reported by William Bortscheller, administrative supply and maintenance technician at the armory. Police were unable to find any evidence of forcible entry but did note several insecure windows.

The padlock that secured the carbines in a gun rack was found on the floor and was described as having been tampered with. Until an inventory is taken the exact number of carbines taken cannot be determined.

KARST SAYS REPUBLICANS FAIL TO AID SMALL BUSINESS

Raymond W. Karst, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative in the Second Congressional District, charged last night the Republican Administration has failed to help the small business man.

Speaking at a meeting of the West Bonhomme Democratic Club at Veterans Hall, Clayton and Baxter roads, Karst said the small business man is the "backbone of our country" and should be aided.

"However," he said, "the national Administration, helped by the Republican leaders in Congress, has demonstrated that it prefers to do business with the large corporations and big business firms who have the wherewithal to influence the Administration's whims and wishes."

FIVE CHILDREN IN 21 MONTHS

DETROIT, May 23 (AP)—When Jim and Betty MacFarlane were married in August 1954 they both said they wanted a large family.

BREEZEMAKER'S BLADES

Shining blades form striking pattern in this view of the nation's largest supersonic wind tunnel, unveiled in Cleveland yesterday by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. The tunnel can duplicate air speeds of 1200 to 1800 miles an hour at altitudes up to 30 miles. Shown are blades of the main drive compressor which blasts air through tunnel. It is powered by a 250,000-horsepower electric motor, the most powerful of its kind in the world. Stator blades (left) form rows which redirect airflow from stage to stage as it is propelled by rotor blades at right.

OUTSIZE OILER ON TROUBLED WATERS

The world's biggest oil tanker, the 47,750-ton Spyros Niarchos, plowing ponderously through choppy waters off the coast of Scotland's Isle of Arran in trial run Sunday. The giant tanker, displacing only 12,000 tons less than the supercarrier Forrestal, the largest warship afloat, was built in Scotland for Greek shipping magnate Stavros Niarchos. It will carry crude oil from the Persian Gulf to British refineries.

PIERS OF PROGRESS

Pointing in the direction of easier driving, piers for elevated section of new expressway take shape in the Vandeventer roundhouse yards of the Wabash railroad. The expressway, linking the Express Highway with Market street, will soar over the yards and leave operations there undisturbed. Demolition of the old Wabash station on Vandeventer avenue will be required, however, as the new road dips toward its junction with Market east of the Market-Vandeventer intersection.

WRITER IN CHARACTER

Looking like a character from one of his novels, Ernest Hemingway, accompanied by his wife, Mary, waits for luggage to be cleared through customs on arrival at Miami airport yesterday. The grizzled writer was returning from a fishing trip in Peru, where he spent a month in pursuit of giant black marlin. The couple continued to their home in Cuba, where Hemingway will supervise shooting of a movie based on his book "The Old Man and the Sea."

Grand Deception

Fritz Kreisler's Hoax
On World of Music

By Louis Biancolli

Fourth installment in a series from the book, "Grand Deception," about some of the famous hoaxes of history.

SOME years ago, while serving as annotator of the New York Philharmonic Symphony, I was obliged to write a program note about a Concerto in G major by Fritz Kreisler.

THE CRITICS NEVER SUSPECTED WHO HAD WRITTEN THE PIECES

Now when this same concerto was first published in Mainz in 1912, Antonio Vivaldi was billed as the composer, with Kreisler credited only as arranger and editor. The 1912 score, however, did carry a tell-tale inscription—in German, French and English—which included the following:

"This concerto is freely treated from old manuscripts and constitutes an original work. . . . When the concerto is played in public Fritz Kreisler's name must be mentioned in the program."

Several previous "arrangements" by Kreisler, from "classical manuscripts," carried similar statements. Even with so many clues lying around, it was not till February, 1935, on his sixtieth birthday that Kreisler's secret finally leaked out. It was then discovered that all but one of the pieces "edited" by Kreisler and ascribed to Vivaldi, Pugnani, Couperin, Francaeur, Porpora and Padre Martini were Kreisleriana, pure and simple.

THE MUSIC WORLD promptly split into two camps—those charging Kreisler with having played cheat, as opposed to those applauding the supreme mastery involved in carrying off the hoax and successfully concealing it for many years. To get the full story I went to the best authority on the subject—Kreisler himself.

"I was at the beginning of my career when it all started," Kreisler said.

"There was the problem of programs. . . . The violinist's recital repertoire was then very small. 'I can't follow you,' I interrupted. 'How about all the standard violin concertos?'"

"Anybody playing a violin concerto with piano accompaniment at that time would have been laughed off the stage."

"How about Bach's unaccompanied sonatas?"

"They were not very popular."

"Beethoven and Schubert?"

"There were some sonatas by Schubert, but Beethoven's sonatas were out of the question. You had to be big to do them and you needed a big pianist to collaborate with you."

"COULDN'T YOU HIRE an orchestra to play the concerto accompaniments?" I asked.

"Scarcely, if you were poor and unknown. And if you were poor and unknown, no great pianist would appear with you. Therefore, no Beethoven sonatas."

"How about arrangements of compositions originally written for voice or piano, which is such a growing practice today?" I asked.

"That wasn't done then," replied Kreisler. "That was why I resolved to create a repertoire of my own."

Kreisler leaned forward, his brow furrowed. . . .

"I then began to write music under other composers' names. I took the names of little known composers like Pugnani and Louis Couperin, the grandfather of Francois Couperin."

"Not a single composition of Couperin's was known. Maybe in faraway libraries there were pieces by him, on yellow illegible manuscripts. You had to rummage around to find them. So with Padre Martini. Naturally, Vivaldi was a bit different. Bach had made arrangements and transcriptions and even borrowed ideas from him. So had others. And his music was scattered around everywhere."

"Was it ever your idea to imitate the style of these composers?"

"Not for one moment. I could have done a better job of copying their style if I had intended it. That wasn't my plan at all. I just wanted some pieces for myself. . . . and I wrote them. I was 18 then and I wanted to be a violinist, not a composer. I wanted to give recitals and I couldn't put several pieces on the program and sign them all 'Kreisler.' It would have looked arrogant. So I took those old forgotten names."

"WHAT DID YOU ANSWER when people began to ask you where you had found these little pieces?"

"I was stumped. I didn't want to be known as a composer. Finally I said: 'I found them in libraries and monasteries while visiting Rome, Florence, Venice and Paris. They were in dusty old manuscripts. I copied them.'"

"How about the critics?"

"They were calling them 'little masterpieces,' worthy of Bach, and so forth."

"You must have been really stumped when the publishers approached you."

"I told Schott, the publisher in Mainz, Germany, the whole truth. The pieces were all mine, I said, but I didn't want my name appearing on them. Schott agreed."

"Were you paid very much for them?"

"He bought the whole set of 25 pieces at $10 each, bringing me exactly $250. That was all the revenue I ever derived from them in Europe. Later I sold them to Carl Fischer's in America and earned some money on them."

"I'd like to hear more about the music critics, being one myself," I said.

"Let me tell you the most beautiful instance of all," Kreisler answered. "Once I wrote a few special pieces for a Viennese recital. I called them 'Posthumous Waltzes' by Joseph Lanner. The following day Leopold Schmidt, the critic of the Berliner Tageblatt, accused me of tactlessness. He raved about the Lanner waltzes. They were worthy of Schubert, he said. How dared I bracket my own little salon piece, 'Caprice Viennese' with such gems?"

"I wrote to Dr. Schmidt. I said I was pained, but I felt compelled, for once, to say that I was, but not devoid of tactlessness himself. I was terribly sorry, but if the Lanner pieces were 'worthy of Schubert,' then I was Schubert, because I had written them! The letter was reprinted everywhere."

"Now don't you suppose critics and musicians who saw that letter would have said to themselves: 'If this is so, then the same thing must be true of the Francaeur, Couperin, Vivaldi, and Pugnani pieces.' All they had to do was look at the pieces themselves and read the inscription, which almost gave the whole thing away."

"DID NO ONE EVER ASK YOU point-blank whether you had composed those pieces yourself?"

"Not until my sixtieth birthday. I was in Vienna. Yehudi Menuhin was playing at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Olin Downes, the critic of the New York Times, was on the program as lecturer and commentator. Menuhin was paying me a tribute by including several of my pieces. Downes wanted material for his talk. He went to see my publisher, Fischer."

"Fischer hemmed and hawed. He told him he wasn't 100 per cent sure himself. Downes immediately smelled a story. He cabled me in Vienna for the information."

"That was really the very first time I was ever asked directly. I did not want to lie. So I cabled back: 'I composed them all myself,' and gave my reason: I had needed program material and thought it unwise to use my own name. The story appeared in the New York Times. That started the avalanche."

TOMORROW: The Man Who Invented Formosa.

By Sylvia Stiles

WHITE footwear is being revived for summer, but it looks much different from the models that once accented warm weather fashions. This season's versions are slimmer, trimmed and sophisticated. There is a vogue of white with bright color. Gold decorations also enhance many of the models while interesting textures contribute to the diversity of styles. Illustrated are some of the summer shoes featured by the St. Louis stores.

1—Gold leaf designs are printed on white leather to create an unusual sling pump by French Room Originals. Open toe is decorated with a gold floral spray dotted with simulated pearls. Heel is high and very thin. Leather of which this shoe is made is imported from Italy.

perky bow. Slim heel is made of the new glass substance that is unbreakable and illustrates one of the significant new developments in footwear design. With this type of heel, the problem of having the slim, thin "stiletto" heels break with difficulty of repairing is eliminated.

3—In addition to the vogue of white shoes, the pastel tints are continuing popular. This Barefoot Original sling pump with the draped vamp and moderate heel may be obtained of white luster calf or pastel pink, blue or yellow calf. An attractive bag of matching calf is available in a boy style with knotted leather handles.

The shoes illustrated here are available in St. Louis Shops. For information call MAIN 1-1111, Station 386, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, or mail self-addressed stamped envelope to Fashions Illustrated, St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

4—The spectator sports pump has returned to popularity but is seen in some new versions. Illustrated is a typical Pandora model. It is of white calf with a brown overlay that is trimmed with buttons. High, thin heel also is of the brown calf. Another style has open toe and heel and is available either in all-ance of brown and white or navy and white.

5—A Miami designer is credited with this new summer sports model designated as "Wedgings." The high wedge is of natural colored cork while the vamp is made of clear vinyl combined with white, gold or pink leather.

6—White luster calf is trimmed with a cluster of pearlized buttons in the design of this D'Antonio model. Pump is cut low at the sides, accentuating the slimmest of the high heel. Wide open toe and open back are typical features.

7—Black patent is used in combination with textured white calf in the creation of a dramatic interpretation of the spectator sports pump. Collar and heel are of the patent. Navy patent also may be obtained in combination with white calf. The slim but lowered heel is a feature of this Delmanette model.

8—Red and navy calf are used to trim this white calf sling pump. Called "Lariat" by the Camille designers, because of the elasticized quarter strap that hugs the heel, the pump has a novel vamp ornament combining the two shades of leather. White calf is of the new velveta or grained texture. Box bag matches the tri-color alliance of the pump.

Stuck Window Sashes.

FROM a standpoint of maintenance it's hard to find anything to beat the early type of windows found in old castles that consisted of a small hole in the wall. As these windows had no glass there was nothing to break and as they had no moving parts, they never stuck. In fact, the only thing wrong with them was that they let in the cold, didn't let in much light and, now and then, let in an arrow from some unfriendly soul on the outside of the castle. One of the big troubles with double-hung windows used in many homes today is that they stick. The sash usually has two good reasons for sticking. One is that someone has let paint get in between the sash and the frame and the other is that the sash has absorbed moisture and expanded.

A sash stuck by paint can often be made to move if you take a sharp knife and run the blade along the seam where sash and frame meet. The knife cuts through the paint film and everything is dandy. Sometimes you can do the job by taking a block of wood, holding it along one side of the sash and tapping this with a hammer. Move the block along the entire length of the side and then move it over and do the same thing on the other side of the sash.

Many people have tried to use a screwdriver, chisel or pry bar to free a stuck sash by working it between the bottom edge of the sash and the window sill. This will often do the job but it also damages both sill and sash.

When a sash won't respond to the knife blade or the tapping of the block of wood, the sash can be made unstick by taking off the little strips of wood that hold it in the sash. These are held in place with nails or screws and usually only one has to be removed. The sash can then be pulled out of the frame and the edges sanded down enough so it can move freely. Coat the edges of the sash with linseed oil before replacing it in the frame.

Canned tomatoes help to make a meat loaf juicy; whole kernel corn added to the meat mixture will give flavor interest.

On Attaining True Greatness

By Fulton J. Sheen

Fulton J. Sheen

THE lighter the bird, the quicker the ascent into the air. Nor has man contrived to build a giant machine that can fly upwards more quickly than a light plane. The sea gull and the duck have to make progress upwards with the help of water, and with unaided movements.

One wonders if that law of flight does not apply to man. Are they who have great intellectual equipment and monetary resources seeking for spiritual ascent than those with simple affections? The Divine answer with a slight paraphrase is: "I thank Thee, O Heavenly Father, that Thou hast hidden these things from the university professors and revealed them to the little ones." This paraphrase may be permitted, since it is written by one who was a university professor for 25 years. The inverse of this is, that the reversal to childhood is a condition of entering the most peaceful of realms.

IF A MAN makes progress either socially, by winning the good will and affection of thousands, or financially, by the filling of his barns with stocks and bonds, may he not well inquire if any of these have been purchased without some sacrifice on someone's part?

Either he who has won much has suffered much to get what he has, or someone else has suffered much to give it to him. Even the physical existence of any man or woman in the world is conditioned upon many sleepless and unrested nights by parents, to say nothing of their wearing old clothes for many years that the young might appear in brighter fashions.

Have not also many achieved greatness through the peculiar set of circumstances in which they found themselves? The gold that was discovered at the edge of the pick, and the oil that spurted because one dug a hole in the ground, are not necessarily due to the acumen and insight of the discoverer.

There are too many "dry holes" in Texas and elsewhere to disprove unflinching wisdom. Just as the cow gets little credit for giving milk, so does the Good Lord get little credit for coal or oil. Advertisements describe products as M—'s milk, or as F—'s coal, but all they did was to transform the gifts of another.

THE SAME is true of those who sweep the world with political or economic ideologies. It has been said that Cromwell would never have prospered if he had not appeared on the scene when the world was getting tired of kings. The day will come too in history when a king will once again seem great, because the world has become tired of dictators and other such "hot dog kings" and "movie queens" and "copper kings."

Karl Marx appeared in history when the world was already seething with the excess of exploitation. His protests were right; his reforms were all wrong. He rode on the crest of the wave, and he will be carried off with the tide in another generation when we have become surfeited with the excess of exploitation. Communism is not the birth of a new order; it is the death of an old one.

THE GIFTS that are not earned by inner sacrifice and moral stamina and in response to grace, retard spiritual flight, as heavier bodies impede the rapid ascent of the birds.

The only way to judge great men is at a distance. They are like mountains; up close they are staggering in their immensity; at a great distance, they level almost into the plains. It takes perspective to determine true greatness.

No greater wisdom is there

Word Game.

TODAY'S vocabulary test is based upon 10 fairly common words. Most of them will give you little trouble but be on the watch for two or three tricky ones. For each numbered word you will find a word of almost the same meaning among the three words and phrases following it. Thus the word numbered 1 may mean practically the same as the word lettered b. Write this down as 1b.

WHEN you have all the answers, check against the correct pairings at the bottom. Score 10 points for each correct answer—100 is excellent; 80 or 90, superior; 60 or 70, fair.

1. Piscatorial: (a) conspiratorial; (b) sweaty; (c) concerning fish.

2. Vituperate: (a) strengthen by rays of sun; (b) abuse with words; (c) shoot; in pain.

3. Rancor: (a) bitter ill will; (b) stale fatty meat; (c) harmony between nations.

4. Dilapidation: (a) run-down condition; (b) extreme laziness; (c) ill-clad.

5. Nugatory: (a) chewy candy; (b) taking a negative approach; (c) trifling.

6. Nettle: (a) drastically upset; (b) irritate; (c) decorate gaudily.

7. Sidle: (a) join hands with; (b) move stealthily towards; (c) distrust.

8. Pilfer: (a) steal; (b) under-price; (c) having hair.

9. Morose: (a) inclined towards suicide; (b) kind of country dance; (c) sullen.

10. Subjugate: (a) bring under control; (b) appeal to higher court; (c) overrule.

Refreshing Note

Give Swiss steak a refreshing note. Cut steaked green peppers in eighths and boil about five minutes in water to cover; drain. Just before serving the beef and tomato sauce, stir in the blanched peppers. Tastes good, looks attractive.

Here's a warning against two common errors in preparing fresh vegetables: soaking during cleaning and overcooking. Give vegetables a quick, thorough cleansing under running water, then chill unless you cook at once.

On Broadway

By Walter Winchell

THE BIG STREET'S first-night-famine deepened the Broadway gloom. Ironically, the closings made bigger theater-news than openings. . . . The $400,000 disaster was "The Ziegfeld Follies," the season's major casualty, with "Strip For Action" runner-up. This ill-fated production cost backers nearly as much. . . . Only four attractions enjoyed Standing Room Only. "Fair Lady," "No Time For Sgts," "Happy Fella" and "Damn Yankees." . . . The box-office blues struck the remaining 20 other offerings which couldn't sell $246,300 worth of tickets. Even the Pulitzer Prize Play, "The Diary of Anne Frank," "ate" about $300 in unwanted seats. . . . The largest empty rack went to the long-run "Fanny." It got stuck with $37,000 worth of ducats, according to Variety's reliable listings. . . . Anthony Farrell was among the top backers of "The Follies." His investment was $30,000. . . . The tailights of the fading season belong to three new girlies, "Carmen Jones," "New Faces" and "Shangri-La." . . . The No. 1 off-Bway ticket is "Threepenny Opera," a tuneful delight. . . . The most exciting, enjoyable, enchanting premiere in Copa history was Jimmy Durante's hilarious return with Eddy Jackson. The star brought along Hollywood's Peter Lawford, who charmed the crowd with his grin, good looks and talent. He belongs in a B-way musical.

JIMMY DURANTE . . . A HILARIOUS RETURN.

THE KODAKTORS: Hitchcock's latest click, "The Man Who Knew Too Much," is a suspenseful chase. Doris Day and James Stewart dash up and down your vertebrae. Doris at her emoting best. . . . "Goodbye, My Lady" is about a boy and dog. It strives for sentiment and settles for schmaltz. . . . "Tennessee Partner" has as much corn as an Iowa crop. . . . "While The City Sleeps" offers a newspaper yarn that has gone to press too often. Dana Andrews and Rhonda Fleming make the most of their burden. . . . Leslie Caron, the Wistful One, is up to her dimples in tears in "Gaby." The film has its poignant moments. . . . "The Brain Machine" is another of the familiar mediocrities. . . . "Emergency Hospital" stars Dr. Hukom.

STAIRWAY TO THE STARS: Katharine Hepburn's complaint, "Being an actress is a humiliating business, and, as you get older, it becomes more humiliating because you've got less to sell." . . . That comment should bring a wry smile to Ethel Barrymore, still a great star at 77. . . . Sugary reviews and Bobby Clark didn't help the "Damn Yankees" box-office in Pittsburgh. . . . "Kiss Me Kate," a large click at the City Center, can thank Kiss Me Kitty Carlisle. . . . The Ringling Bros. star clown (Kelly) got $160 per week. His wage at the Romy Theater will be $2000. Mabel Mercer's By-Line Room (on W. 56th) has an entertaining song-stylist named Don Roscher. In the daytime he is a salesman at Jay Thorpe's. . . . Elvis Presley's fantastic platter sales (in the millions) are double his nearest competitor's. That, plus personal apps, films, etc., will net the newcomer $1,500,000 within one year. . . . Recommended: Willie Threat's ballads at The Black Magic. . . . Director Elia Kazan is looking for an actress to replace Barbara Bel Geddes in "Cat."

THE HOLLYWOOD LINE: Gene Kelly's "Invitation to Dance" (completed 2 years ago) will be released shortly. All music, no wordage. . . . It will determine whether Art is Box Office. . . . Jack Lemmon made it The Hard Way. Worked in more than 300 tv plays before Hollywood beckoned. . . . 20th Century-Fox's soon due "D-Day" (see "The 6th of June") is by novelist Lionel Shapiro, whose name does not rate mention anywhere in Variety's full page ad. (Hmf). . . . Jeff Chandler is at his best in "Away All Boats." . . . The Hollywood Age of Specialization has reached its peak. One makeup man on DeMille's "The Ten Commandments" had the chore of covering up the immense cast's vaccination marks.

THE QUOTE OF THE WEEK: Deborah Kerr's: "Much of censorship is ridiculous. For instance, sex can be presented in the most vulgar tawdry manner, yet we cannot say hell on the screen. Heaven and Hell are always with us. Why can't we mention both?"

Grandmothers

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

HALF the grandmothers who write me complain that they don't see enough of their grandchildren; the other half complain that they see too much of them. Some mothers are inclined to resent grandma's intrusion, while others want to unload the care of the children on her almost completely. It is not easy to keep in the middle of the road. "I'm a widow, leading my own life, enjoying it, and keeping busy and useful," Mrs. E. writes. "My daughter has two small children, 3 years old and 14 months. She has asked me to come and live with her and take care of the children while she takes a job. She really doesn't need to work, Dr. Popenoe. Her husband has a good salary. I guess she's just bored with family life and wants to get away from home; but she doesn't see any reason why I should be equally bored with family life—her family, that is—and not want to be tied down to her home. Is there any reason why I should sacrifice my own freedom for this?"

NOT AT ALL, Mrs. E., and I hope you'll stand firm. Many young women who have been badly educated for family life seem to think that an easy way to shift responsibility is to dump it in the lap of grandma. What such a mother needs is re-education, not an alibi.

Some of these young mothers, I'm sorry to say, have been educated to think that homemaking is an inferior occupation. They tell their friends, privately, that they don't want to waste their lives and talents as unpaid domestic servants.

I'm one of the old-fashioned persons who think that no woman is too good to be wasted on her own children.

SLIDING OUT from under the responsibilities of parenthood is too common nowadays. Occasionally it is urgently necessary for financial reasons. Sometimes, however, it's just a mere case of "passing the buck." In such a case, it's harmful to all concerned.

It's harmful to grandma, who ought to be leading her own life.

It's harmful to the young mother, who ought to be recognizing the importance of her job as a homemaker, and putting her best efforts into it, and enjoying it.

It's harmful to the children, who can't help feeling somewhat rejected, and who are turned over to a woman who represents the patterns of two generations previous. No matter how intelligent and devoted she may be, she can't fully substitute for mother.

Tell your daughter so, Mrs. E.

School Comic Who Graduated to TV

That's Story of Jonathan Winters, Who Gets Paid for Making Noises That Drove Teachers Mad

By Clarissa Start

HIGH school teachers might do well to reconsider before they upbraid the round-faced comic in class who shows a talent for making peculiar noises which convulse the rest of the class. The funny noise-maker may have a popular and profitable future ahead of him. Perhaps like Jonathan Winters, television's newest success story, who can still remember when his high school teachers used to subdue him daily for making the same noises for which he now gets paid handsomely.

Winters, who first hit big time last summer when he became the summer replacement for George Gobel, and has since been starred on NBC's "Comedy Hour," currently is meeting his television public face to face at the Chase Club of Hotel Chase. It's his first appearance in St. Louis but by the time he'd been here half a day he'd been recognized by a goodly segment of his following. Not only does Winters look like his television self—only younger, most people tell him—he clowns and jokes as a comedian should, but very few do. Part of this is reflex action from writing his own material, a carryover from the days when he was too poor to hire a writer.

Although he tells the story lightly, as he pieces together the jigsaw segments of his 30 years of life, you gather that some of the going was rough. Winters thinks that was a good thing.

"The average guy who leads a normal life is the one with the black lunch box and the hardboiled egg and the peanut butter sandwich," he says. "You know he's going to be that the rest of his life, content to mow his lawn and water the flowers and stay around home. It's the one who's had some sorrow and the tough times who is strong enough to go some place."

As for big scale success in his own life, he admits he wanted it. "I wanted it bad enough that I was going to get it."

ORIGINALLY he intended being an artist. An only child, whose full name is Jonathan Harshman Winters, he was born in Dayton, O. His father is in the investment business, and his mother, Mrs. Alice Bahman, who is divorced and remarried, is in the radio end of show business. She is now on a lecture tour, at present in Jefferson City, and her son hopes this finds her well as he isn't much of a letter writer. "I'm not funny in letters," he says. "I write things like, 'The sun is out, the grass is green, I am in St. Louis, I feel real good and hope you do, too.' That kind of stuff. About sixth grade."

Winters went to Kenyon College, studied commercial art, and then he and a friend bummed around the country, for a while, working as waiters and short order cooks at Yellowstone National Park—"two lonely kids," as he recalls. Back in Dayton, he married and it was his wife, Eileen, who persuaded him that he might do something a little steeper and more lucrative. As a result of his local reputation for "being funny," he got a job as disc jockey.

"It was on station WING and they didn't hire me because of my musical background," he says. "It was because I could do voices and be cheerful from 6 to 8 in the morning. That in itself is a little difficult when you know that 90 per cent of the populace are like grizzlies coming down to the moat to eat. And that all of them are growling. 'How can you be funny in the morning?' But if you're getting paid for it, you'd be surprised how brightly your little face lights up."

From WING, he tried doing a television show on WBSN. It was a great local success and every visiting New Yorker passing through told him, "You should come to New York." Four years ago, he pulled up stakes, and did. When he got there, he couldn't find any of the people who had encouraged him to make the move.

"I lived with two other guys down in Greenwich Village and for seven months we kicked around, living from hand to mouth," he recalls. "I managed to keep one white shirt and one pair of pants pressed and one pair of shoes shined, whether I ate or not. I didn't have a telephone so they couldn't call me. I had to keep going to them. I didn't have an agent the first year so I booked myself."

FOR booking himself, Winters did pretty well. He got several radio and television jobs in between mediocre club dates. He got on Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scout show and Gary Moore picked him up and gave him 20 shots on his show. Then he booked himself into the Ruban Bleu supper club.

"I didn't have enough material for a full show," he says. "Only four bits, or pieces of material. But I told them if I could get on, I'd write something for the second show. I wrote most of it backstage. I still write 98 per cent of my material."

From the Ruban Bleu, he went to the Blue Angel, appeared on "Omnibus," "Studio One," on Imogene Coca's show, and briefly, in a Broadway show. By this time he had acquired three boosters, Gary Moore, Steve Allen, and Jack Paar, who had him as their guest frequently. Last summer when he was offered the replacement stint for Gobel, he had cold feet about taking it on his own but agreed to try it with someone else. He was teamed with Ransom Sherman on "And Here's the Show," and it was a happy combination. Winters says he's never worked with any one more congenial. The only show that outraged him was the "64,000 Question." This past winter, he was established even more firmly on the "Comedy Hour."

Much of Winters's success depends on his flexible voice which can sound like a golf ball or a bumblebee. He doesn't apologize for his school of comedy and thinks the people who sometimes say, "You're nothing but a noisemaker," are in a class with the teachers who used to say, "Stop making those silly noises."

"And I remind them there's

Brain Game

HERE is a numbers quiz based on the Bible. Six correct answers is excellent.

1. How many daughters went forth from Sodom with Lot?

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Dr. Albert E. Wiggam

1. IS THERE ANYTHING IN THE WORLD WORTH WORRYING ABOUT? YES ☐ NO ☐ 5. MANNERS MAKE THE MAN? TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

Answer to Question 1. No. You worry because you want something you haven't got—money, love, health, nylon hose, gasoline—or you worry about jealousy, fire, etc. These are just a few of the 1600 things one psychologist lists that normal people worry about. But worrying knocks out your very physical and mental ability to get what you want. You want something and then put the brakes on your ability to get it.

Answer to Question 2. No one ever amounts to much who does not. But no one ever amounts to much who day-dreams and does nothing about it.

Answer to Question 3. True. Psychologists know of no way of sizing up a man, other than by what he does—his manner of behavior. Even if by manners you mean "Emily Postings" your way through life, whether you eat with the right fork, whether you tie your napkin around your neck or just lay it on your lap—these things reveal a great deal about a man's life history. True, it reveals his background and training but it also reveals, to a considerable extent, how he has responded to his background.

French Dressed Broiler Meal
Six medium-sized tomatoes; one-half cup fine dry bread crumbs; one-half cup garlic-flavored French dressing; one 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained; two 10-ounce packages frozen French-cut green beans, cooked; six loin lamb chops.

Cut tops from tomatoes. Combine bread crumbs and three tablespoons French dressing. Mix well. Top tomatoes with crumb mixture. Combine mushrooms and three tablespoons French dressing. Cook over low heat five minutes. Arrange beans in bottom of broiler pan. Top with mushroom mixture. Arrange chops on broiler rack. Broil three to four inches from source of heat eight minutes, or until chops are browned. Turn chops and baste with remaining two tablespoons French dressing. Broil three minutes. Arrange tomatoes on broiler rack with chops. Broil five minutes. Yield: Six servings.

Contract Bridge

THE strategem used by Mr. Dale to make today's contract is not a new one, but it is one which is frequently overlooked by those declarers who refuse to enlist the valuable aid of the enemy.

Mr. Abel led the king of clubs and when the dummy went down, Mr. Dale saw at once that three spades would have been a much more comfortable contract. After winning with dummy's ace of clubs he had two quick losers in the minor suits. He could now lose only one trick in spades. With six spades out, including the ace and jack, chances of success appeared dismal indeed.

He was not cheered by the fact that he could finesse either way against the jack of spades. He would still have to guess which way to go. And even if he guessed right he would have to find the opposing spades distributed unfavorably.

For example, if four spades to the jack were on his left and the ace doubleton on his right, he could lead low from his hand and put in dummy's eight spot. This would be a "right" guess and would force the ace. But the jack would still win a trick.

Mr. Dale saw no reason to gamble as long as there was a chance of putting his money on a sure thing. At trick two he led the jack of clubs, and the king would have made if he had really wanted to ruff a club in dummy.

Mr. Abel fell into the trap. There was no way for him to know that his partner had started with as many as five clubs. He won with the queen and, just like a good opponent should, quickly returned the deuce of spades. Mr. Dale played the trick with dummy and it lost to the ace. But now both the queen and the king were available to pick up the rest of the spades, including the jack. The guess in the spade suit had disappeared. And so had the defenders' chances of defeating the contract.

Red Cross Convention Scheduled Here in June

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

EARLY next month—the dates are June 3 through June 6—a national convention of the American Red Cross will be held in St. Louis for the first time since 1924. Five thousand delegates, not only from this country but from Switzerland, Great Britain, Indonesia, Korea, Viet Nam, Peru, Alaska, Cuba and Hawaii, will be here to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Red Cross. They will learn more of the organization and its work in a lengthy series of meetings; will exchange ideas and will be entertained at many parties.

Whitehead T. Terry is convention chairman, and Mrs. G. Chadbourne Taylor, incoming chairman of volunteers for the Midwest Area, has the prodigious task of assigning 1000 local volunteers, representing every branch of Red Cross activity, to convention jobs.

Important on the list of visitors are Mr. and Mrs. E. Roland Harriman of Washington (he is chairman of the board of governors of the National Red Cross); Lady Reading of London, director of volunteers for Civil Defense in Great Britain; Mrs. Joe Hume Gardner, the former Miss Florence Leland of St. Louis, who has held numerous national offices; Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson of Washington, national director, office of volunteers; Mrs. Kester L. Hastings of Washington, deputy national director, who has just returned after attending an eight-week course on civil defense training sponsored by Lady Reading in London; Mrs. Philip Pillsbury, Minneapolis, who has held many volunteer offices, and the other area directors of volunteers—Mrs. W. Jasper Dubose, eastern; Mrs. Virginia Snyder, southeastern, and Mrs. Richard L. Sloss, Pacific.

Registration at Kiel Auditorium Sunday, June 3, will be followed by an open house from 2 to 5 o'clock at Midwestern Area headquarters, 4050 Lindell boulevard. Meanwhile, from 3 to 6 o'clock, there is to be a special exhibit of Edward Steichen photographs, "The Family of Man," of which Mrs. Robert McKittick Jones II is chairman, at City Art Museum.

The program June 4 will begin with 8 to 10 o'clock breakfasts at Sheraton-Jefferson and Statler Hotel for the four area delegations, and will continue with business sessions at Kiel Auditorium and an international relations luncheon at the Sheraton-Jefferson. Afternoon discussion meetings will be followed by the seventy-fifth anniversary musical cavalcade, "Banner High," a dramatization of Red Cross service, acted by 300 volunteers from theater guilds and narrated by Theodore P. Desloge, in Convention Hall of the auditorium.

A volunteers' breakfast Tuesday at the Statler and all-day meetings at the auditorium will be climaxed by the most important social event of the convention, the Board of Governors' Reception on board the steamer Admiral. The boat will start on a river cruise at 5:15 in the afternoon and return to its berth at the foot of Washington avenue at 7:45. John Moss Hall will be master of ceremonies for an amusing program, for which Mrs. Garneau Weld is chairman. Thirty young hostesses in costume will be on duty and Mrs. Clarkson Carpenter Jr. will star in a skit.

At 8 o'clock that night junior Red Cross leaders will attend a school and college dinner and entertainment at the Sheraton-Jefferson.

On the final day of the convention, Mr. Harriman will give a luncheon at 12:30 in the Ivory room of the Sheraton-Jefferson and an hour later will conduct a meeting with the chairmen in the Gold room. Group meetings and discussion meetings according to the delegates' interest in the Red Cross will precede the final general session from 4 to 5 o'clock in the Opera House of the auditorium.

Miss Dean Selects June 12 Wedding Date.

MISS ALICE ANN DEAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dean of the Hawthorne apartments, 4475 West Pine boulevard, has selected Tuesday, June 12, as the date of her marriage to Jerry Loton Wanninger. The ceremony, to be performed by the Dr. Frank Porter, will take place at First Congregational Church and will be followed by a reception in the Fellowship hall of the church.

Miss Nancy Lee Wobbe will serve as maid of honor; Miss Jean Wanninger, sister of the bridegroom-elect, will be bridesmaid, and two junior bridesmaids will be Judith Wanninger, another sister, and Linda Lee Peters, Miss Dean's cousin.

Mr. Wanninger, who will be graduated next month from Washington University with a bachelor of arts degree in advertising design, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Wanninger, 203 Royal avenue, Ferguson. Robert McNeely will be his best man and Jack Kuhl, Wayne Herrmann, Gene Hoefel and George Vreeland, cousin of the bride-to-be, will serve as ushers.

The first pre-wedding party honoring Miss Dean was a kitchen shower given by Mrs. Michael R. Richmond, 5929 McPherson avenue, which was followed by a luncheon and miscellaneous shower a few days later with Mrs. Laura Fliegenschmidt and her daughter, Miss Leo I. Miller, as hostesses at the Miller home, 1124 Haley avenue, Ferguson. Miss Dean shared honors with another bride-to-be, Miss Annette Grolock, May 8 at a personal shower given by Mrs. Hugh M. Crull of Hill Top Farm, Clayton road, Town and Country. Miss Grolock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Grolock, 25 Deerfield road, Ladue, will be married to William C. Ellis June 8. Mrs. C. L. Thomas, Mr. Wanninger's aunt, gave a luncheon Saturday for Miss Dean at the University Club.

A luncheon and linen shower will be an event of Saturday to be given by Mrs. Howard E. Ridgway at her home, 31 Huntleigh Woods, Huntleigh Village. Co-hostesses for a miscellaneous shower May 31 will be Mrs. Jack Miner, Mrs. Winn Omohundro and Mrs. M. W. Konold at the latter's home, 645 Scott avenue, Kirkwood. The last party will follow the rehearsal Sunday, June 10, and will be in honor of both the engaged pair and Mr. Wanninger's parents, who will be celebrating their twenty-third wedding anniversary that day. The party, a dinner, will be given at the Bath and Tennis Club.

Looking Toward Future

By Eleanor Roosevelt

THOSE who had the time to watch television Sunday afternoon may have seen the new General Motors Technical Center. General Motors also published a beautiful booklet which gives one a good idea of the way in which this technical center is trying to look into the future.

Mrs. Roosevelt.

The opening paragraph of the booklet tells the story pretty well: "More than half of the Twentieth century is behind us—nearly half ahead of us. From the past 50 years have come miracles—the automobile, the airplane, motion pictures, radio and television, and the splitting of the atom. But this is history, and all of us should be more interested in the future because, as C. F. Kettering puts it, 'There's where we are going to spend the rest of our lives.'"

AND SO General Motors now has dedicated this new technical center where research will go on in all lines affecting technical developments of the future. And there will be a great need there for hundreds of young scientists and engineers, well-trained men with lots of curiosity and imagination.

The company does a good job in looking after the needs and comforts of those who work in this remarkable research establishment. There is even a technical center service section, which operates and maintains site facilities. "Research, styling, manufacturing development, and the engineering staff group function as independent units and as tenants on the site maintained for them by the service section," the company explains.

The center includes a central restaurant and supplies food to cafeterias in other buildings. There is a medical department.

"Paul says I'm a peach!"

Paul thinks it's just wonderful the way I keep our house looking practically perfect and still have time to do so many other things. The plain truth is that I've found faster, easier ways to get my work done. Take wood floors. Cleaning and waxing them was something fierce. I can still remember how my muscles ached for days after. But not now. It's almost a pleasure with Bruce Cleaning Wax. There's no floor washing at all! Bruce cleans and waxes at the same time. And my wood floors really look beautiful. Much nicer than when I did them the hard way. If you have wood floors, you'll really appreciate Bruce Cleaning Wax.

Incidentally, I've found other Bruce floor products help me, too. There's Bruce Floor Cleaner for cleaning and lighter waxing, Bruce Paste Wax, Bruce Asphalt Tile Cleaner, Bruce Asphalt Tile Self-Polishing Wax and the new Bruce Self-Polishing Wax. Yes, for floors, it's Bruce!

with branches in buildings of the other operations. And in this section is one of the largest private communication boards in the world, designed to handle telephone and teletype services for all of the technical center's operations.

THIS SERVICE SECTION supervises fire equipment, plant protection facilities and ambulance service. It produces and distributes heat and power to all the units and must maintain an adequate water supply and 11 miles of roads as well as watch over 25,000 trees, plants and shrubs of more than 200 varieties.

Actually, this section's operations cover almost all of the activities undertaken by the government of a small city, with a few that are peculiar to the highly technical nature of the center's operations.

If you can obtain a copy of this booklet, it will interest you. I am sure it will stimulate your imagination and set you wondering what the future has in store for all of us. As human beings, we will be more interested in how it will affect each of us personally, but it is well for us to know about all these technical developments, since without any question they will change the tenor of our lives.

Medical Center Installation, Tea Scheduled

By Fay Proffitt

MRS. WILLIAM B. GEIGER will be installed as president of the St. Louis Women's Auxiliary of the American Medical Center at the auxiliary's annual tea Monday at 1 p.m. in Harris Hall of Shaare Emeth Temple. Mrs. Philip F. Lichtenstein is the retiring president. Mrs. Rubin Frank is chairman for the tea.

In addition to Mrs. Geiger, Walter J. Simon will install the following: Mrs. Joseph H. Feldman, Mrs. Sam Goldstein, Mrs. Sam Rabushka and Mrs. Nate Rosenblum, vice presidents; Mrs. Samuel Stern, recording secretary; Mrs. Irving Schwartz, assistant; Mrs. Louis Saenger, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. C. Rose, circulation secretary; Mrs. Hyman Goldstein, assistant; Mrs. Philip Bach, financial secretary; Mrs. Frank and Mrs. Leo Sigoloff, assistants; Mrs. Joseph Rossen, treasurer; Mrs. Maurice Simon, assistant; Mrs. Henry Hirschfeld and Mrs. Milton Haas, guides; Mrs. Morris Friedman, chaplain, and Mrs. James Ginsberg, assistant, and Mrs. German Landau, historian.

At a short business meeting preceding installation, Mrs. Geiger will give a delegate's report of the national convention in New York this spring.

The St. Louis Auxiliary and its five chapters recently held their donor luncheon at the Chase Hotel with more than 600 women attending. Chairman of the luncheon was Mrs. Nate Rosenblum. Mistress of ceremony was Mrs. Louis R. Levy, newly elected vice president of the national board of the American Medical Center.

The June board meeting will be held June 8 at Ruggeri's at 10:30 a.m. Luncheon at 12:30 p.m. will be followed by an all-games party.

Auxiliary President

MRS. WILLIAM B. GEIGER, NEWLY ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE ST. LOUIS WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL CENTER.

Picnic Supper for Club.

Martha Carr's OPINION

Dear Martha:

FOR the past four years we have been on friendly terms with a couple, and many times have included them in parties that we have given just because they were never included in any other activities. We felt sorry for them, and many times invited them when we were really the only ones who wanted them along. We went to great lengths to make them feel welcome. Now, we find they recently gave a large party and invited everyone but us. It is not that the party meant anything to us, but it is just that they didn't have the courtesy to extend an invitation to the people who were kindest to them. I don't want to become bitter, but what would make a person act in this manner? As far as I am concerned I hope I never have the misfortune of seeing them again. I find it very hard not to be resentful. Am I justified in my attitude toward them?

It's a perfectly natural reaction on your part, but let me warn you that your bitterness and resentment will be harder on you than on them. I agree they were quite discourteous, especially if the other guests were persons with whom you would be congenial. Is it at all possible that your invitation could have gone astray? You might keep the door open on that score, but even if you do try to excuse them in your own mind, it would make sense now to find other friends.

Dear Martha:

I AM A SENIOR in high school and have been going with a boy for four years, who is now a sophomore in college. I have been his guest at college dances many times, and that's where my problem arises. I do not like drinking. During the time we have been going together, we have had only a few arguments, but they were all about drinking. Don't misunderstand me. He isn't a drunkard. It's just that I object to any kind of drinking, including social drinking. I do want to try to change my attitude, for I know many people do drink. I don't drink, and he doesn't want me to. But I don't even want to be with others who do. I realize that when I am out of school this problem will confront me many times. What can I do to overcome this?

Because drinking is such a universal custom today, those who go out a great deal socially should try to develop the kind of poise which will support them should they find themselves in the presence of persons who are taking a social drink. This poise will enable them to say "No," and stick to their convictions without seeming to be a prude or making those around them uncomfortable. But those, such as yourself, who feel very strongly on the subject, would be wise to limit their social contacts insofar as is possible to non-drinkers so that there will be no embarrassment or conflict. There are many who do not drink as a matter of principle and they should be permitted to take their stand as they wish without interference from those who do enjoy an occasional drink. It is as wrong and as rude to insist that a person drink as it is to criticize one who does. Don't compromise your convictions on this subject. Stick to your guns and you'll probably have a good influence on other young people who haven't your courage. But by the same token, if you are dating this boy—and he doesn't drink to excess or become ugly or abusive—you'll just have to accept him for what he is and try not to make a scene about it.

Send today for Martha Carr's free leaflet of prayers and grace to be said at the table. Be sure to inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Tip for Men

By Ruth Millett

MEN, here's a tip for you. In a recent Y.W.C.A. poll in which 15,253 girls and women were questioned about what they would most like to do, more than 15,000 of them put travel at the head of the list. And when it came to listing their favorite fun activity, the majority were strongly in favor of putting on their dancing shoes and stepping out for an evening of rug cutting. How does this consensus affect you men? It's simple. If you want the girls you are planning to marry in June or have already married to enjoy life, don't forget a woman's love of travel and dancing.

Your idea of fun may be quiet evenings at home and your idea of a vacation may be fishing or hunting. But don't forget that if the girl you marry is companionable enough to let you have your evenings at home, if she'll even go along with you on your camping trips, you might do your part to see that she gets to do some of the things that come first with her. Every now and then she may want to get dressed up and go dancing. And as a change of pace now and then she might like to do a little traveling instead of going back year after year to where the fish are supposed to be biting. You might even conduct a little private poll of your own with two questions: "Honey, if you could go anywhere you want to go this vacation, where would it be?" And "What would you really like to do next Saturday night? You name it and we'll do it." But if you get her to wishing, be sure you are prepared to try to gratify the wish.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

READER WRITES: "I would like to know if it is proper to return a birthday present that is the wrong size which was received from a person living in another state, and ask her please to exchange it for the right size. My husband thinks it should be kept, regardless of whether it fits or not and eventually given away to someone whom it will fit. I would very much appreciate your opinion on this matter." If you send it back to the store and ask them to please send you another size, that would be quite all right. Whether you can request the giver to do this depends on how well you know the person. If it is someone you know very well and can be frank with, you could say, "I'm terribly sorry Jane but the gloves, or stocking (or whatever) are the wrong size. Will you please exchange it for size . . . ?" If it was sent from someone you don't know too well, you will have to keep it and say nothing.

Prospective First Ladies

Mrs. Harriman Was Born to the Purple

Governor's Wife Has Presided Over Grander Mansions Than White House

By Ruth Montgomery

This is the third article in a series listing the women who, at this writing, have a chance to become the next "First Lady" in the White House.

(Copyright, 1955, By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, May 23.

THE very thought of becoming chateleine of the White House would stagger some women—but not Marie Harriman. She has already presided over grander mansions.

The wife of New York's multimillionaire Governor Averell Harriman, is charming, attractive, and born to the purple. She is also a talented artist and interior decorator who once turned her hobbies into a well-paying enterprise.

If green plush eventually vanishes from all railway cars, a grateful public can thank Mrs. Harriman, who designed the interiors of her husband's crack streamliners—Union Pacific's City of Los Angeles and City of San Francisco.

The industrious Marie not only outlaid plush on these two trains, but inaugurated comfortable mattresses and pillows, planned more leg and head room, and designed new linen, silver and china.

Running the 54-room White House would be a breeze for witty, outspoken Mrs. Harriman, who once graced Arden House, the 150-room mansion which Harriman inherited and later presented to Columbia University.

Besides the Governor's Mansion at Albany where they now reside, the Harrimans boast a New York townhouse, a "cottage" on the grounds of Arden House, a Long Island estate at Sands Point, a Sun Valley mansion and a winter home at Hobe Sound, Fla.

The blue-eyed daughter of Sheridan Norton, a prominent Democratic lawyer, was born 32 years ago in New York City. Her marriage to Harriman is the second for both of them.

Marie's two adult offspring, Payne Whitney and Mrs. Edwin D. Morgan Jr., are the children of her first marriage to Cornelius (Sonny) Vanderbilt Whitney, whom she divorced during the mid-20s. Harriman was also divorced by his first wife, who died several years ago.

MARIE HARRIMAN . . . SHE CAN QUOTE THE BATTING AVERAGES OF MOST NEW YORK GIANTS PLAYERS, ALSO BOWLS, SWIMS, SKIS, FISHES AND PLAYS CANASTA.

If Harriman should capture the White House, his wife would promptly replace Mamie Eisenhower's softly feminine pinks and greens with striking blues and yellows—to set off her fabulous collection of modern art.

Marie, who once sold a pink Picasso to Chicago's Art Institute, ran her own thriving New York art gallery for 12 years after her marriage, dealing only in American moderns and French impressionists.

But an original painting by traditionalist Dwight D. Eisenhower would probably hang in the White House, if she moved there. It's an oil depicting a scene at Sun Valley, the fabulous Idaho resort founded by Harriman.

Marie also owns a Winston Churchill original which she laughingly describes as "a glass, a bottle of scotch and a bottle of brandy painted with great feeling."

A rabid baseball fan, Marie would undoubtedly look on with real enjoyment if her husband ever performed that traditional presidential chore—throwing out the first ball of the season. One of those unusual women who can quote the batting averages of most New York Giants players, she also bowls, swims, skis, fishes and plays canasta.

She collects foreign recipes and slips away from official duties as often as possible to partake of her favorite Chinese food.

EUROPE saw much of Marie while her husband was President Truman's roving ambassador, but Russia has yet to meet her. Mrs. Harriman did not accompany him there during his war years as our chief envoy to Moscow.

At the time, officials explained that she was too busy with volunteer work in New York, where she toiled from eight to 16 hours a day with the Ships Service Committee. Later, however, she confided that a series of eye operations for glaucoma had kept her in America.

If lightning should strike her husband at this year's convention, Marie will happily ride the campaign train but leave the speech-making to Averell.

A motherly woman who reared her own two children and adopted two English moppets for the duration of the war, Marie would unquestionably overflow the White House guest rooms with visiting grandchildren—of whom there are nine.

And she would frankly love to live there. Asked if she thought her husband's $40,000,000 fortune would prove a handicap for the candidate of the "common man's" party, Marie protested: "Averell was a boy-ohce, and any American boy can aspire to be President. Doesn't that apply to rich, as well as poor ones?"

Apricot Bread Recipe

By Edith M. Barber

QUICK loaf bread has long been associated with afternoon tea. Not all of us have time or opportunity to partake of this delightful custom. These breads, however, are just as good as a luncheon dessert or a breakfast bread.

Usually these loaves have some special type of flavoring. For instance, with nut bread brown sugar and the nut meats themselves supply this. Dried apricots, soaked of course, with a little orange juice supply a particularly good flavor in a nut loaf.

Recently at a supper party a caraway loaf was served. The flavor was so good that I begged for the recipe to pass on to you. This is made by the cake method. The apricot bread is not quite so rich and because it contains a good deal of sugar, this is added to the well-beaten egg before the melted shortening is combined with the dry ingredients.

The first recipes for nut bread suggested that after the batter is mixed and put into the pan, the loaves should stand for 20 minutes or so before baking. There seems to be no reason for this delay and in modern recipes this step is eliminated.

A low-moderate temperature should be used for all quick loaf breads, as they take an hour or more to be thoroughly baked. The loaves should be allowed to cool on a rack before they are cut. Remember that a sawing motion with a long, sharp knife is best for slicing a soft bread of this type.

Apricot Bread.

Ingredients: One-half cup dried apricots, one-half cup water, two cups sifted flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon baking soda, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one egg, well beaten, one cup sugar, two tablespoons shortening, melted, one-half cup orange juice, one cup chopped nut meats.

Soak apricots in water one-half hour. Drain, reserving water, and grind apricots. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Combine well-beaten egg and sugar and mix well. Stir in shortening. Add dry ingredients alternately with orange juice and one-quarter cup of the water in which apricots were soaked, stirring well after each addition. Stir in apricots and nut meats. Mix well. Bake in greased eight by four-inch loaf pan in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) one and one-fourth hours. Cool before cutting. Yield: One loaf.

Caraway Seed Loaf.

Ingredients: One-half cup butter (oleo or other shortening), one cup sugar, two eggs, two cups flour, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon mace or nutmeg, themselves supply this. Drier ing powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two to three tablespoons caraway seed.

Cream butter, add sugar and eggs. Sift flour with mace and dry ingredients, add alternately with the milk. Place in bread pan and bake one hour at 350 degrees F.

Secrets of Charm

Friendly Approach

HOW friendly are you toward those you don't know? How friendly should you be?

Ladylike reserve is a charming quality, but there's no charm in being reserved to the point of sometimes behaving like a wooden Indian.

The reason behind a retiring attitude may be only shyness or fear of rebuff, but it's easy to tag as coldness or snobbery. There are times, and many of them, when it is kind and very much to your credit not only to respond to a stranger or someone you've just met, but to take the initiative yourself.

DON'T WAIT for a new neighbor to speak first. Add a friendly word to your greeting. Welcome a new fellow worker. Single out a shy person for an occasional moment or two. Draw someone who may feel like an outsider into the conversation. When there are guests who aren't as well acquainted as the rest of the party, make an effort to get them to circulate—and this goes for another hostess's party as well as your own.

Chat with the newest member of the club and sit with her if she seems to be alone. Speak to the person who sits next to you at church or at a church or civic gathering, and often it's appropriate to introduce yourself and exchange a few friendly words. Speak to the person you met recently, whether or not you're sure you'll be remembered. It's better to be unrecognized than to be thought rude.

DO YOU ALWAYS WAIT FOR OTHERS TO SHOW FRIENDLINESS TOWARD YOU? NOT IF YOU'RE A CHARMER.

Rice Variation
Vary cooked rice by adding grated raw carrot, finely diced green celery or shredded spin-ach. After draining the hot rice, just mix in the vegetables along with a good dollop of butter or margarine.

The Dawdling Child

By Angelo Patri

"WHAT is one to do with a child who dawdles so that one has to keep after her every minute or she will be late for school? Nothing seems to do any good. She stops to look out of the window, she fiddles with her clothes and sings, she pets the cat—in short, she does about everything but get ready for breakfast and be on time."

All I can say is that there are children like that and one must keep pushing them along until they develop a time sense and feel the pressure of a "must" behind them. In time, this develops. Meantime, we act as their starters. We found that lively music helped some of these slow movers. Also, we used the alarm clock to time such chores as dressing. Finishing before the bell was rewarded with praise and perhaps some little special privilege or treat.

THE TREATMENT of this annoying trait must be graduated according to the age of the child. Training ought to start about the age of three, and this consists in the main of helping the child dress, get to the table, and eat. This helping must be steady, day by day. There must be no show of impatience, nor should too much speed be demanded on the child's part. This is just another chore a mother of such a child must add to her long list and she will know that in time, by patient and persistent teaching and help, the child will learn some degree of promptness.

When starting to train such a child, the mother has to do most of the work. Dressing is one of the essential skills the child must master, so it is usually the one we begin with. We help the child get into his clothes, letting him fumble along as we keep things moving. Finally we get one shoe on and say, "Now let me see you put that one on, all alone, like a big boy (or girl)." One day he will succeed in doing that and he is on the way up.

"OLDER DAWDLERS, those who know the bus comes at eight, that school starts at nine, etc., can be helped by clock watching. "You have 10 minutes to gather your things. Start now and see if you can have them on and be ready when the bell rings."

An alarm clock is invaluable here. "You see, the mother, or whoever is in charge, still has to be the starter, but in time experience will help this child to develop a time sense. This will be markedly so when he loses some hoped-for trip because he was late. This will happen when he is along about nine or 10 years of age, and it will help to spur him to action. Meanwhile, we struggle and teach and train."

Hat Trimming

Fruit is substituted for flowers in the trimming of many spring hats. Brilliant colors of cherries, currants, grapes and other fruits are matched or contrasted with the straw. These hats are featured with dresses and ensembles made of printed silks or with wool suits of the dressmaker type.

Non-Skid Surface

A good way to give walks and drives a rough and non-skid surface is to brush over the concrete before it is dry with a stiff broom.

Try and Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

JOE E. LEWIS wired Abel Green of "Variety" from Las Vegas that the City Council, suddenly book conscious, is planning a new public school, within walking distance of all the most educated roulette wheels and crap games. They'll call it, thinks Joe, "P.S. 6-to-5."

MR. SAPPORAS was watching the stock ticker when his 12-year-old daughter phoned to report, "Mommy put both cars in the garage this morning and now she can't get them out."

"Why not?" asked Mr. Sap-poras. "You seem to have forgotten just like mommy," said his daughter. "We only have a one-car garage."

Silk Tweed

Silk tweed is a popular fabric that looks especially impressive in pale sand or oatmeal tones. It is used for slim dresses that are topped by little jackets that fit closely to the figure. Box-jacketed suits, and dressmaker suits with waist-long jackets are combined with flared or pleated skirts for other handsome costumes.

Colorful Suggestion

Membrane-free sections of orange and strips of green pepper will give color to a meat, poultry or fish platter.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Wed., May 23, 1956 7 D

B-V MAKES RICH, BROWN GRAVY

...IT HAS THAT "T-BONE TASTE"

A little Wilson's B-V makes a lot of difference when you want meat-rich, brown gravy. That's because B-V is extract of real beef—not just a seasoning. Try Wilson's B-V in gravy, soups, meat loaf, stews, broth and hamburgers—taste the difference it makes. Then you'll know why leading restaurants rely on B-V for extra flavor!

The best cheese sandwiches have Kraft DeLuxe Slices with rich cheddar cheese flavor!

It takes really fine cheddar to make handy pasteurized process cheese slices that taste as good as Kraft American, Kraft Pimento and Old English Brand.

Kraft Master Cheese Makers are very choosy about the cheddars they select to blend together before the perfect, sandwich-size slices are made for you.

That's why you see the word "De Luxe" on Kraft packages. That's why you're smart to pick the packages marked Kraft De Luxe Slices—the best-eating pasteurized process cheeses you can buy any place.

In addition to the cheddar-type—Kraft Swiss and Kraft Brick pasteurized process cheese slices

Uncle Ray's Column

By Ramon Coffman

A CURIOUS suggestion has come that the name
"Shakespeare" arose from a man who used to "shake pears" from trees.

The name arose in England,
a leading pear-growing country, and the idea might possibly be correct. Much more likely, however, "Shakespeare" came from a nickname given to a man who was found of shaking the spear which he carried.

OTHER FAMILY NAMES
from Old England are similar.
One of these, "Shakeshaft," suggests the shaking of the shaft of a spear. Another, "Breakspear," may have been applied to a man who often broke the shaft of his spear.

The hair played a part in providing names for people. A man with black hair might be called "Edward with the Black Hair," or later Edward Black.
In the same way White, Brown and Gray may have become family names because certain men had hair of those shades.

The name Green (also spelled "Greene") came in a different way. A grassy field was known as a "green" in England 800 years ago, and it was common for a village to have a green, or park. A man who lived at the edge of the green might be called "David of the Green," or David Green. Other names of

THE FIRST "SHAKESPEARE"
MAY HAVE SHAKEN A PEAR TREE OR A SPEAR.

the type are Greenfield, Green-vale and Greenwood.

IF A MAN showed more strength than his companions, he might be called "the Strong," and people later would speak of his wife and children as members of the Strong family.

Now and then an animal name was given to a man. If he was shrewd, he might be called "Jack the Fox," or Jack Fox. The name of Wolf arose in the same manner, and so did Bear. Barnyard animals suggested such family names as Bull, Hog and Steer.

A man who liked to fish, or who made his living by selling fish, might receive the name of Fishman, Fisher or Fish. Special kinds of fish supplied names for some families—as Pike, Herring and Salmon.
